Um, SEE!
Oh, see the Mon-key, bless his lit-tle heart! He has a de-light-ful sense of child-ish hu-mor. He put a fire-crack-er in-to the Li-on's pipe and laughed with glee when the fire-crack-er Ex-ca-me bu-sy. Oh, these mer-ry child-ish pranks! How they make us feel young! Of course if the Li-on catches up with the Mon-key, as he prob-a-bly will, he will break sv-er-y bone in the Mon-key's bo-dy. And the Li-on will feel much young-er him-self. Let us there-fore re-joice.

THE FIRST BABY PRIZE WINNER

LITTLE five-year-old Evelyn G. Nourse, of Arlington, Mass., wins the first $100 baby prize. The photograph of the prize-winning child printed on this page is from the well-known "Aram" Studio, at No. 74 Boylston street, Boston, and was especially posed by Mr. Aram Kazanjian himself, the photographer. The child's mother is Mrs. Agnes L. Nourse, and the $100 check has been sent to the mother to start a bank account for litttle Evelyn.

Next Sunday another $100 prize-winning baby will be announced. The baby prize contest will continue until all the babies have had a chance to enter the competition. In sending in your baby's picture select the most attractive photograph you have of the child, and be careful to write its full name and age on the photograph, together with the parents' name and address. Mail the baby's picture to

BABY PRIZE EDITOR,

Children over six years of age are not eligible. It must be understood that the photographs are not to be returned.

EASY TO CUT AND MAKE AT HOME.

THE coming season is bringing with it so many beautiful fabrics and designs that the possibilities of the home dressmaker are very nearly limitless.

There is a notable and extravagant use of neckwear among the accessories this season, those little things that go so far toward the successful make-up of the fashionable toilette.

They are all on the jabot idea, and are the outcome of the Marie Antoinette frills so popular last Summer. These jabot frills are wide and full and extend down the front the full length of the bodice.

A novelty that the Fall season has brought in is the scarlet jacket. They are very picturesque and dashing and are shown in two styles—one tight fitting, ornamented with gilt buttons, the other semi-coat fitting and completed by a hood that extends out upon the shoulders. The models are also to be found in the tartan plaids.

Anything new in the line of dressing sacques is always hailed with delight by the women who make these pretty things instead of buying them ready made.

The dainty model shown certainly expresses grace and comfort in every line, and the fitting and making is a question of very little time. The front is gathered to a yoke and may hang free from the shoulders, or the waist may be girdled by a ribbon or belt of the material.

Soft pink challis with trimming band of pink flowered silk is represented, but French flannel, cashmere, Japanese silk or the flowered cotton crepes will serve admirably.

Children may now be well dressed at very little expense, if the mother is at all clever with the needle, and, besides, the little garments made at home are, as a general thing, far more attractive than those bought ready-made, as far more attention is given to the fit and finishing.

This is to be a plaid season; in fact, they never go entirely out of fashion and are always suitable and becoming for children. We will see many stylish little dresses in the clan tartan, and also in the French plaids.

These clan plaids come not only in the regular tartan, but in mohair and the mercerized cottons.

The growing popularity of the gumpe dress for girls makes it an admirable choice for a plaid or black and white check. These little frocks have pleasing style when worn over a dainty white gumpe than an all plaid frock.

Shepherd's checks and plaids also are much in vogue and up-to-the-minute mothers for the making of pretty little school frocks, which are now worn with vests to match.

Cloth for the coats may be had from a variety of materials like cheviot, serge, cheviot, broadcloth and astrakan according to the purpose for which the garment is intended.

For the small boy no style is so becoming as the Russian blouse. The pretty little model sketched is one of the newest.

The wee ones of the household must have their lounging robes as well as mother, and no more simple or comfortable little garment could be included in Baby's wardrobe than just such a little wrapper as is here pictured.

At least two will be needed, and French flannel, cashmere and outing flannel can all be used.

What the "400" Are Wearing

by Mrs Cholly Knickerbocker

A T no time is it harder to appear well than 'tween seasons.

The frocks and frills of Summer have been laid aside.

It is not yet time for the more luxurious Winter garments.

I saw Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, Blanch Shoemaker that was, wearing quite an ideal country frock at a week-end party.

It was made of that smart and comfortable material, white flannel, and the model was quite out of the ordinary.

The gown was made in one piece, with a box plait running from neck to hem.

The waist part of the frock was made very simply, with plaits set in on either shoulder to give the necessary fullness. This was drawn down snugly under a narrow stitched belt, which slipped under the wide box plait in front.

The sleeves came to just below the elbow, and had turned back cuffs. A turned down collar of flannel was attached to the waist, and with it was worn a tie of black silk of generous proportions. Buttons ornamented the length of the box plait.

A large black hat, flat as to brim, and the crown quite concealed by paradise plumes, was chosen for wear with this dress.

Red seems to me rather unusual to pick out for one's chosen color. Particularly if one is fair and blue-eyed as is Miss Carolyn Fellowes. But she's quite devoted to this warm and wintry color.

But, for a wonder, she refrained from even a touch of red in a costume I saw her wear at dinner at one of the country clubs the other night.

She was in pale blue, all pale blue, trimmed with creamy lace. The material of the gown was chiffon taffeta of a particularly soft, supple weave. It was made on a princess model, with a yoke composed of lace and fine tucking, put together on rather original lines. From the yoke downward to the hips the silk was finely tucked and clung closely to the figure.

The sleeves were rather simple puffs, finished with three narrow pipse ruffles. A jabot of lace further ornamented the front of the waist. The arrangement of lace and tucking used for the yoke was repeated as trimming on the skirt. The wide lace insertion ran up and down in V-shaped pattern, edging the finely tucked empiecement.

You can't deny that stripes, if properly used, can be tremendously effective and smart, and you couldn't find a much better example of this than in a gown of Miss Susan Street's.

In this gown the stripes were very cleverly managed. The material was silk and the stripes black and white.

The skirt was cut on a circular model, with a seam directly at the centre of the front. The stripes met on the bias here and consequently ran around the skirt, raising slightly on the hips. There was no fold or trimming of any kind on the skirt.

The waist itself was made with the stripes running up and down, but two bands of horizontally striped silk were applied from shoulder to belt with very good effect.

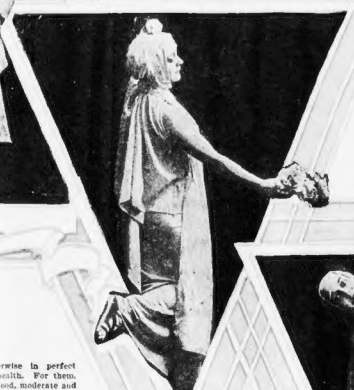
Neither Too Fat Nor Too Thin

How Any Woman May Retain Forever the Graceful Lines of Her Face and Figure



Simple Exercises Used by Regina Badet, the Famous French Beauty, to Preserve the Perfect Harmony of Her Form.

AMONG the miseries to which flesh is heir none impedes the progress of great beauty more than obesity or excessive fatness. Both are irreconcilable enemies of the lines of beauty and must be persistently fought by the woman who would be always charming in face and figure.

Obesity is the excessive development of the adipose tissue. Features and lines disappear under rolls of fat, movement becomes more and more difficult, the body grows more and more shapeless. Flesh accumulates at the base of the cheeks and forms first a double chin, ultimately even a triple one. It encircles the abdomen and stuffs the chest and bust out of proportion.

The figure is gradually deformed until finally it disappears altogether. The face loses its expression, the flesh about the mouth and eyes puffs up and the lines are lost. It becomes difficult to stoop or to lie down, lethargy increases rapidly.

If, however, obesity only destroyed one's beauty, it would not be so serious. Unfortunately, as it encroaches more heavily, it impedes the essential organs of life. It affects the heart, the lungs, and becomes a menace to health.

The causes of obesity are manifold, but nearly all of them may be laid at the door of excessive nutrition. The cause must be attacked first.

There are cases, of course, where obesity is congenital. Sometimes it is hereditary and steals slowly upon one at the age of thirty or thirty-five years. But in the majority of cases, obesity is acquired and is bred by the life we lead. We become fat because we lack the will to restrain our appetites, to regulate our meals and to move about energetically.

The origin of obesity is almost always due to good living, to the consumption of fatty foods and sugary substances, to too much drinking of beer, alcohol and water, to a sedentary and unhealthy life.

It is most frequently a disease confined to the wealthy, who are at liberty to sit at ease all day. Fat increases with amazing rapidity when once it has laid hold of its subject.

When you perceive its advances, redouble your work, your activity, your exercises.

In America, among the so-called society class, many, many women are too fat. There is one apparent reason for this fault. Americans eat too much, they drink too much, principally too much ice water, and they do not exercise enough.

Beauty is nowhere seen more superbly represented than in America. There are no more beautiful women to be seen anywhere. But, unfortunately, there is a lack in their figures of harmony, of line. However, this fault may be remedied with proper living and proper exercise.

As a matter of fact, only the special physician employed by a person who is too stout can properly prescribe. Each case requires a different treatment. There are many people who should never try to make themselves thinner, and many who should never attempt anything without the advice of a skilled doctor of medicine.

The first advice for the person who is too fleshy is to sleep six or seven hours at the most. Only thin people should sleep longer. They should make rest the object of their lives. The afternoon siesta belongs to them. The nap after dinner is their right. Never should a person inclined to be fat sleep after a meal.

Leave the table always when you are still hungry. Little by little you will get used to the sensation and the stomach will lose its tyrannical habit of craving for too much.

Avoid eating fat things, butter, grease, oils, fatty meats, nuts, starchy foods, pastry, tapioca, potatoes, rice, beans, peas, sago, arrowroot, sugars and sweets, bonbons, chocolates, candied fruits or sweet fruits, such as apricots, pears, cherries, etc. Stews and gravies are bad, so are ducks and geese. If you must eat poultry let it be chicken and turkey. Let your meats consist of roasted mutton or beef, rare, without grease or gravy. Choose fish that is not fat; turbot, sole, bass are good.

Drink as little as possible and never drink between your meals. Avoid alcohol in every form—beer, port, cider, champagne; in fact, all gaseous drinks. Of course, never indulge in a glass of milk. Drink acid white wine, light, and mixed with water or a little weak tea, very hot.

If you take Turkish baths, do not follow them with cold showers. If you take warm baths, the same rule applies.

Live as much as possible in a dry, high altitude. Exercise regularly. Walk quickly, row, swim, ride, do light gymnastics of every sort, skate, play lawn tennis, dance. Do everything to invite perspiration, but do not overdo these exercises.

Exercises like those shown in the illustrations on this page are much in vogue among women in France and are very effective in preventing obesity and preserving the graceful lines of the figure.

The opposite of obesity is to be too thin. As this way this is as great a misfortune. An angular person has not more beautiful lines than a fat one. To be beautiful the body must be in harmony. The moment harmony is destroyed, beauty suffers.

Frequently, like obesity, thinness is congenital. It may be the result of malnutrition or of trouble with the digestive organs. Of course, in either of these cases, only a physician who has made a study of the causes and who has arrived at a proper diagnosis may prescribe. As any one may see, each of these cases deserves special and individual treatment.

Nervousness is also a great cause of wasting one to the bones. American nerves require an article all by themselves. The woman who has repose is rarely too thin. The woman who moves constantly, never keeping her hands or feet quiet, is the woman who shows bones. Cares, troubles, unhappiness, jealousy, great mental work may all be responsible for wearing off flesh.

Of course, as soon as it begins visibly to decrease the case is serious and requires the attention of a physician. Frequently women seem just to grow thin and to be otherwise in perfect health. For them, food, moderate and proper exercise, massage and an untroubled existence are the remedies. This people should take long rests in the country. Not near the sea, which is exciting. They should eat everything that agrees with them, and just the things which the fat woman should avoid.

Let the fain woman sleep long, let her take all the rest she can get, as many naps as her inclination permits the more the better.

She should drink milk and plenty of it. She should take very weak coffee, with plenty of cream in it. Eat farinaceous foods, wheats with butter, eggs, oysters, clams, snails, shrimps, fat fish, sugar preserves, honey, butter, fatty meats, oils, the dark meat of fowl, etc.

It it agrees with her she should drink malt stout, beer. She should exercise, but never to the point of perspiring.

Massage is, of course, important in both cases of obesity and thinness. But massage, properly done, is difficult to acquire. To massage one's own body is impossible.

By massage only is it possible to fatten or diminish certain parts of the body, the legs, the arms, the shoulders, etc. Properly directed, massage of certain parts may work wonders.

Thin women should not take hot baths. They should bathe only just enough to keep clean. Cold sulphur and salt baths have had most excellent results.

After her bath the thin woman should never forget to have herself rubbed with alcohol and a flannel glove.

Electricity in certain cases is excellent, and all sorts of unguents and oils may be recommended.

"Saucy Sissy"

1 "Saucy Sissy," said her mother, "you are sweet sixteen to-day,
And I want my child to grow up wise and good;
You must be a little lady, you must give up childish play,
And behave as any nice young lady should.

2 "Now, a model of good manners will be better far, I think,
Than repeated exhortations to behave,
So I'll give you for your birthday this wax lady, Polly Pink;
Can't you copy her demeanor, sweet and grave?"

3 Sissy cried, "She is a daisy! Such an elegant effect!
She's just my ideal lady to a dot!
She poses like a Duchess! I WILL try, and I expect
I shall catch on to her manner like a shot!"

4 "Saucy Sissy," cried her mother,
"be more careful how you speak!
You mustn't use expressions such as those!"
Then a busy little dimple
played in Saucy Sissy's cheek,
While she copied Polly Pink's effective pose.

Continued Next Sunday.

5 Sissy went down to the parlor,
and a soulful-eyed young man
Approached and said,
"How beautiful is youth!"
Saucy Sissy tried to be grown-up,
she idly waved her fan;
"Ah, yes," said she,
"that is a truthful truth."

6 "You're psychic!" said the soulful one.
"Your spirit I can read!
You've aims that soar!
You've talents that exalt!
Your impulses uplift!"
Said Saucy Sissy, "Yes, indeed!
Just watch me turn
a double somersault!"

Newly Most Beautiful Woman in England Will Own the Biggest Diamond in the World

Lady Marjorie Manners with the King's Diamond in Her Hair

THE Government of the Transvaal, through the initiative of General Botha, the Prime Minister, has presented to King Edward the famous Cullinan diamond, the largest in the world.

The present is intended as a token of loyalty to the King and of gratitude for the bestowal of a constitution and self-government upon a colony with which England was so recently engaged in sanguinary warfare.

The Cullinan diamond is colossal. So large is it that all diamonds, however famous, whether Koh-i-noor or Tiffany, become insignificant and ridiculous in comparison with it. It weighs 3,024¾ carats, which is about one and a third pounds. The Koh-i-noor, which was long considered the finest diamond in the world, weighs only 970 carats. The Cullinan measures 4x2⅜x1¾ inches.

Now that the mighty diamond has been presented to King Edward, the most interesting question that arises is, What will he do with it?

It is not possible to set it in the imperial crown, for it would completely overshadow that bauble and produce a very inartistic effect of disproportion. The King could hardly wear it upon his august finger or place it in a scarf pin, for he does not care to look ridiculous.

Queen Alexandra doubtless will have an opportunity to wear the diamond, and perhaps she may do so. There has been considerable discussion as to how it should be worn to produce the most dazzling effect and to adorn the wearer most becomingly. The favorite suggestion is that it should be set in a tiara, so that it would stand above the forehead, like a blazing star. Sarah Bernhardt once said that the wearing of a brilliant diamond near the face was a grievous error, because it distracted attention from the face and made it appear dull, sallow and lifeless. In spite of this dictum, a vast number of women would find themselves unable to resist the temptation of wearing so stupendous and costly a gem as the Cullinan.

To give an idea how the Cullinan diamond would look in actual use, a photograph is printed here showing Lady Marjorie Manners wearing it in her tiara. She is generally considered the most beautiful young woman in English society, and the announcement of her engagement to the King's nephew, Prince Arthur of Connaught, is expected very soon. Would Lady Marjorie's pretty face appear more attractive if it were surmounted by the largest diamond in the world, or would it be overshadowed?

Another photograph shows the mighty sparkler set in a bracelet upon a woman's arm, the breadth of which it entirely covers.

The great diamond will lose one-third of its weight by cutting, a process which will occupy three years and cost $100,000.

Health and Strength by Exercising in Bed

A Method By Which the Busiest Man Can Develop His Muscles Without Trouble, Expense Or Loss of Time.

Exercise to Broaden the Chest and Beautify the Arms. These Movements May Easily Be Performed in Bed.

A GREAT many ingenious and interesting systems of exercise have been offered to the public lately, but it is not too much to say that all of them leave something to be desired as a way of gaining means of obtaining health and strength.

Everybody wants to take exercise and knows that he ought to do so, but after a brief attempt he usually gives it up because of the trouble, expense or loss of time. If he goes to a gymnasium, this requires some expense and a considerable expenditure of time. He must give up a certain amount of time usually devoted to sleeping or loafing, travel to the gymnasium, take off his clothes, go through laborious exercises, take a bath and then put on his clothes again.

Even at home it requires an unusual degree of perseverance to get up early, especially on a cold morning, and go through a series of exercises.

To engage regularly in some exercise or sport in the open air calls for an even larger expenditure of time and money.

Now, Mr. Sanford Bennett, of San Francisco, has invented a system of exercising which obviates nearly all of these difficulties. He explains it fully in an interesting book just published under the alluring title "Exercising in Bed."

It appears to be no trouble but a great pleasure to exercise in bed. Every man spends more or less time in bed and most of us prefer to pass a good deal of it there. When you exercise in bed you don't have to go to any special place or put on any special costume. You just stay where you are and a little while before the time you ought to get up, you go through some simple exercises. The principal ones are illustrated in the series of diagrams on this page.

The result of taking these exercises regularly, it is said, is to make a man or woman strong and healthy, free from dyspepsia and all the other common troubles that attend the sedentary life. The mere taking of exercise in a recumbent position is particularly wholesome, because we spend too much time in an upright position, which impairs the circulation and deranges various bodily organs. Exercise in bed has a great many other advantages, which are explained by its inventor. It enables one to rise without difficulty at the proper time, feeling well and strong, with the blood circulating vigorously and thoroughly.

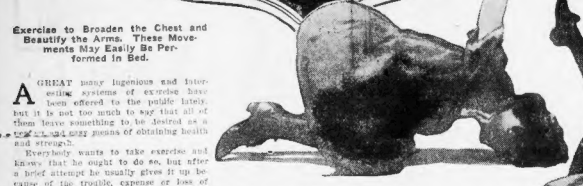
Exercise in bed has done marvels for Mr. Bennett, as he demonstrates by photographs and by certificates from his doctors. At fifty years of age he was a sickly, overworked business man; at sixty-six he is in splendid health, with the muscular development of a prize-fighter, the change being entirely due to exercise in bed. Here are some points of interest quoted from his doctor's certificate:

February, 1895.	April, 1906.
Asthma with decided embonpoint.	Waist, 28 inches; no fat around the abdomen.
Neck, 14 inches.	Neck, 15 inches.
Arm muscles atrophied and flabby from lack of exercise.	Development of arms creditable for an athlete of fifty.
Hair, quite bald.	Hair has become quite luxuriant.
Chest expansion, 3 inches; symptoms of arterio-sclerosis slightly developed.	Chest expansion, 5½ inches; has all the elasticity of a young man.
Complains of chronic dyspepsia.	Digestion good.
General physical condition, poor.	There is a remarkable preservation of tissue integrity and functional activity.

The exercises recommended are a series of alternate rhythmical contractions and relaxations. They provide a system of muscular pumping which not only eliminates from the parts of the body treated dead cells, worn out tissue or other clogging matter, but also accelerates the circulation and increases the supply of blood to those parts.

A few mechanical appliances are used by Mr. Bennett, including a pair of five-pound dumbbells, and a board eighteen inches long by four inches broad, to which two short ropes eighteen inches in length are attached, terminating in ordinary pulley weight handles. This appliance has the effect of a lifting machine in developing the loins and shoulders. All the exercises can be performed under the bedclothes. Half an hour is the maximum time which should be given to them.

The massage exercise for developing the biceps and triceps muscles of the arms, together with the loin muscles, is an important preliminary. In this case lie on your side, with the upper arm stretched parallel with the body. Then with the opposite hand grasp the outstretched arm firmly between the elbow and shoulder. Then contract and tense these muscles by bending the arm and relax them by straightening it to the first position. While thus alternately contracting and relaxing the muscles of the upper arm, massage them vigorously, both in their tense and relaxed condition. The massaging is very useful in freeing the system from waste-products.



Move the Hands Forward and Backward, While Breathing Deeply.

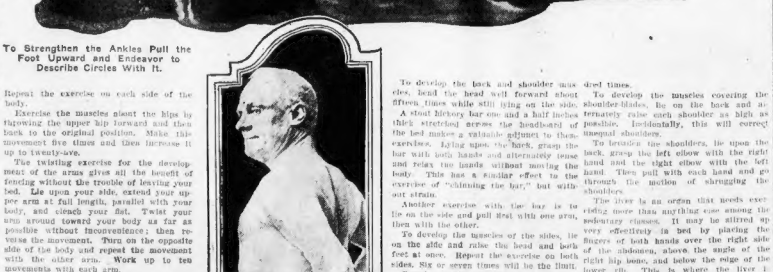
Draw the Body Upward and Backward by Pulling With the Feet. This Gives a Strong Straight Back.



To Strengthen the Ankles Pull the Foot Upward and Endeavor to Describe Circles With It.

Repeat the exercise on each side of the body.

Exercise the muscles about the hips by throwing the upper hip forward and then back to the original position. Make this movement five times and then increase it up to twenty-five.

The twisting exercise for the development of the arms gives all the benefit of fencing without the trouble of leaving your bed. Lie upon your side, extend your upper arm at full length, parallel with your body, and clench your fist. Twist your arm around toward your body as far as possible without inconvenience; then reverse the movement. Turn on the opposite side of the body and repeat the movement with the other arm. Work up to ten movements with each arm.

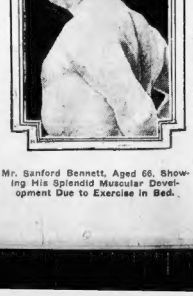
A very simple and useful exercise consists in lying on one side and grasping the upper wrist with the lower hand. Pull upward with the upper arm, resisting each pull with the lower arm. At each movement turn the wrist slightly as it lies in the clasp of the hand. This exercise is especially recommended for women who wish to develop the beauty of their arms.

To develop the forearms, grasp the wrist (the "pulse") of your lower arm with the upper hand; press with your full strength downward, resisting with upward pressure.

The next exercise is to strengthen the muscles of the back and loins. Lying upon your side, clasp your hands over the upper knee. Exert your full length in a steady pull; then relax. Repeat the exercise ten times on each side.

The last named exercise may be varied by pulling with one hand only.

To stretch the whole body, lie on your back, grasp your elbows with your hands and stretch your body to its full length. Alternately stretch and relax your muscles. This will set the blood tingling in every vein.



Mr. Sanford Bennett, Aged 66, Showing His Splendid Muscular Development Due to Exercise in Bed.

To develop the back and shoulder muscles, bend the head well forward about fifteen times while still lying on the side.

A stout hickory bar one and a half inches thick stretched across the headboard of the bed makes a valuable adjunct to these exercises. Lying upon the back, grasp the bar with both hands and alternately tense and relax the hands without moving the body. This has a similar effect to the exercise of "chinning the bar," but without strain.

Another exercise with the bar is to lie on the side and pull first with one arm, then with the other.

To develop the muscles of the sides, lie on the side and raise the head and the feet at once. Repeat the exercise on both sides. Six or seven times will be the limit.

Certain exercises are specially designed to reduce excessive stomach. Lie on your back, bend one knee upward and inward, drawing up the hip on that side. This action tenses all of the lower abdominal muscles. Repeat the action on the other side and keep on alternating. This exercise is very beneficial to the digestive system.

An important exercise in military "setting up" drill consists in standing up with hands on hips and bending from side to side as far as possible. The equivalent of this exercise may be performed in bed, resting upon your back, with your arms folded across the chest, raise the head and shoulders slightly, so as to clear the pillow. Then bend as far as possible ten times on each side. This will exercise the loin and side muscles thoroughly.

The legs are more exercised than other muscles among persons in ordinary business life, but still the "climbing muscles" are neglected. These are the large muscles of the front of the thighs and in the calves of the legs. A man in whom these muscles are not developed is unfit for climbing a hill or surmounting any considerable obstacle. They may be developed very satisfactorily in bed. Attach to the foot of your bed a cord about one and a half feet in length, terminating in a pulley weight handle. Lying on your side, grasp this handle, then press firmly against the footboard of the bed with the ball of the foot, and alternately press and relax the pressure. This alternate pressure and relaxation will imitate the act of climbing with the leg so exercised, and put no strain on the heart, which is a great advantage over mountain climbing.

A particularly good exercise for dyspepsia and stomach troubles is to lie on the back and bend the head well forward. Repeat as often as convenient.

Striking the abdomen sharply and repeatedly with the hands is another excellent exercise for stomach troubles. It may be repeated with advantage up to one hundred times.

To develop the muscles covering the shoulder-blades, lie on the back and alternately raise each shoulder as high as possible. Incidentally, this will correct stooping shoulders.

To broaden the shoulders, lie upon the back, grasp the left elbow with the right hand and the right elbow with the left hand. Then pull with each hand and go through the motion of shrugging the shoulders.

The liver is an organ that needs exercising more than anything else among the sedentary classes. It may be stirred up very efficiently in bed by placing the fingers of both hands over the right side of the abdomen, above the angle of the right hip bone, and below the edge of the lower rib. This is where the liver is most easily accessible to outside pressure. Press the fingers upward and well under the rib, and then relax. Repeat up to one hundred times.

Perhaps the most remarkable discovery Mr. Bennett has made is that exercising in bed cures baldness. This he attributes to the improvement of the circulation and the cleansing of the body from impurities.

1.—Massage Exercise to Develop the Biceps and Triceps of the Arms, Combined With Exercise of the Thighs.

2.—Second Position in the Massage Exercise, the Arm Being Alternately Stretched Out and Drawn Up.

3.—Developing the Back Muscles of the Arms, by Grasping the Muscle of One Arm and Alternately Pulling and Relaxing.

4.—Rotate the extended Arm as Far as Possible in Both Directions. This Reproduces the Most Valuable Feature of Fencing.

5.—Developing the Arms by Holding One Wrist and Pulling Apart as Hard as Possible With Both Arms. Alternately Release and oContract.

6.—Developing the Back by Pulling Hard on the Knee and Relaxing. This Must be Repeated On Each Side.

7.—Pulling on the Bar at the Head of the Bed to Develop the Arms and Shoulders. This Is Equivalent to Chinning the Bar.

8.—Strengthening the Waist and Abdomen by Moving the Knee Backwards and Forwards.

9.—The Climbing Muscles of the Legs May Be Developed by Alternately Drawing Up and Relaxing Each Knee.

10.—The Same Exercise as the Preceding, With the Opposite Knee In Action. This May Be Repeated Twenty-five Times on Each Side.

11.—Banishing Dyspepsia and Strengthening the Abdominal Muscles by Percussing the Abdomen With Each Fist Alternately.

12.—Broadening the Shoulders by Holding the Elbows and Pulling Outward With Each Arm.

13.—Using a Lifting Board Attached to the Foot of the Board, to Increase the Lifting Power. The Ropes Are Inflexible.

14.—A Stretching Board May Be Used for Broadening the Shoulders, Opening the Chest and Increasing the Lung Capacity.

A SERIO-COMIC ROMANCE OF THE GREAT WHITE WAY

How Actor Jack Heron Miller's Near-Shooting of Himself Because a Beauteous Actor Lady Suddenly Wedded Another, Inspires Him to Ascribe His Conduct to "Dementia Dramatica"—Prevalent in His Profession but Never Fatal.

J. Heron Miller, Surrounded by Stage Beauties in a Scene in "The Gay White Way."

"Jack" Miller.

"DEMENTIA dramatica" it is called, Jack Miller, J. Heron Miller, you know, son of Henry Miller, the very famous actor, has so christened it.

And that furnishes the keynote for this very pretty and sentimental romance of "The Great White Way," which is upper Broadway, New York.

Jack's "Jack" Miller's excuse for near-shooting himself in the Players Club, of New York, a few hours after Miss Mary Marshall Pullen had telephoned him that she was off to be married to another.

"Villain, you have wronged me. Now perish!" cries the dramatic denouement. But the villain doesn't, and unless he and the suffrage wind up in a police station for excessive tenancy of personality that's all that is pos-

"I forgive you, Reginald. I shall die," moans the deserted Samaritan, putting a pistol to his head. But the ball goes out the window or up in the roof and the victim is spared.

That is part of young Mr. Miller's discovery. Here is what the affliction has been made famous during the Thaw trial:

"That which is vulgarly called a 'souse' is necessary"

Miss Estelle Christy, the "Christy Model," to Whom Young Mr. Miller Is Said to Have Transferred His Recuperated Affections.

'Alas! Instead, I nearly shot my dear friend, Harry Woodruff.'

"That's a fine message for a man to get from his fiancee."

"The Earl of St. Germans is very furious."

Miss Mary Marshall Pullen (Second Figure from the Left), Who Became Mrs. Reginal Wright Kaufman Just Before Young Mr. Miller Near-Shot Himself.

Miss Christie—"Am I fat?"

A Good Cure for Shyness.

THERE is probably no defect which causes so much anguish of spirit and discomfort as shyness and blushing. Nobody who has not personally suffered from it can conceive what it may cause.

Shyness may proceed from one of two causes—the one physical, the other mental. People shrink from their fellow creatures and are filled with an unreasoning horror of meeting or speaking to them. The best cure for this kind of shyness is fresh air, exercise and cheerful society.

But there is another shyness, and one harder to cure, which comes from mental and nervous causes. The person so afflicted may ... robust health and yet be tormented by inward enemy that she finds all intercourse with other people positively a strain. To meet strangers causes her a severe struggle. She would gladly turn down the first street corner to avoid bowing to even an acquaintance.

In either case the root of the matter is self consciousness; and it is only by losing that self consciousness that self possession can be gained. As long as one thinks about oneself at all one will be liable to shyness. The only cure is to thrust all thought of oneself into the background as much as possible, when one will gradually become natu-

Just What it Is And How it is Built

Hips All Gone; the Waist-line Likewise. The Line from Skirt-hem to Arm-pit Is as Straight as it Is Possible to Make It. The Bust Is Pushed High Up, but That Also Is Not Much in Evidence. Long Trailing Skirts Pulled Tight Around the Figure Drag Around the Feet. The Top of the Skirt Climbs Up Almost to the Arm-pits—Curves Are a Thing of the Past.

PAQUIN THE GREAT has spoken and lo, the women of the fashionable are becoming hipless!

If you don't believe it go to Sherry's or any other ultra-fashionable spot in New York—at the luncheon hour and see the women lately addicted to displaying their new accentuated figures.

Alas, where are the curves of yesterday? You may look in vain for them. The up-to-date woman resembles nothing so much as cylinders of varying widths.

You'll have no difficulty in recognizing the novelty of outline. Hips are gone, the waist no likewise. Long trailing skirts, pulled tight around the figure, drag to look one way, the feet making walking almost out of the question.

The line from skirt hem to arm-pit is as straight as it is possible to make it. The bust is pushed high up but that also is not much in evidence. It is still a few inches below the arm-pits.

There is a wide girdle effect at the waistline, a survival of the Empire mode. Whether it is destined to be firmly boned, and must be worn if the features of the new figure are to be preserved, is not yet evident.

It is evident that the frou-frou petticoat of taffeta or heavy satin, so dear to the heart of the fashionable, is an impossibility with the new lines.

It will be a sealing out a petticoat of some kind, which is to wear under the tight skirt. And to counteract the lack of assertion on the part of the hipless one must let down and tied it with bands of satin ends just above the knee. I imagine that it is going to be awfully awkward. Fashion, however, does not bother her followers much after this fashion for daytime dress is well under way.

At present the hipless figure is seen to best advantage in the tailored suit. Just above the knees are the words and phrases which will be a guide for the modiste and tailor for the coming season. Just what will be worn in the way of petticoats with the hipless figure is still a matter of conjecture.

It has been suggested that the petticoat be made of the same material as the gown, but this is not considered good form. It is said that the petticoat should be of some contrasting material, and that it should be made with a deep flounce, which will show when the wearer walks.

The Parisian Corset Makers Have Invented a New Corset, Pictured Here, Which Fastens in the Back, for Use with the Hipless Style of Dress. It is made of Very Strong Silk Net work, Which is Perfectly Flexible, but Cannot Be Stretched Out of Shape. It is Lightly Boned and Has Scarcely Any Bulk, so That it Produces a Reverse of Effect of Slenderness. The Natural Projection of the Hips is Completely Dissimulated By This New Accessory of Fashion.

The Fashionable Corseted Figure of 1906 Accentuated the Curve of the Waist and Defined the Line of the Hips.

In the Figure of 1907-8 Not a Curve Is Seen. The Line from Arm-pit to Hip is Almost Straight.

This Is Just How the Fashionable Woman Will Look in the New Hipless Gown.

The bust is pushed high up but that also is not much in evidence. It is still a few inches below the arm-pits.

There is a wide girdle effect at the waistline, a survival of the Empire mode. Whether it is destined to be firmly boned, and must be worn if the features of the new figure are to be preserved, is not yet evident.

Is a Man More Loyal Than a Woman?

IT is difficult to say whether man is more loyal than woman, for we expect much of each sex and are disappointed equally often in both when they fail us. But there is always a whole lot more said about man's disloyalty than woman's. Perhaps it is because we are quicker to see the faults of the stronger sex, and more ready to suffer for the general weakness of woman.

Women are more easily pleased, they are more easily tolerant, more eager for companionship and more appreciative.

It is not at all unusual to find a loyal friendship between women, though it is rare to find a loyal friendship of the fair sex. A woman's capacity to forgive, so long as she imagines that forgiveness is best for her, is almost unlimited, and many a "dearest friend" becomes her bitterest foe.

At the present day we hear a great deal about women's rights, women's suffrage, and so on, but the men who make so much disturbance about these matters do not, as a rule, do it out of a feeling of loyalty. Their idea is to have a finger in every pie, to bring their names before the public, and to be looked upon as martyrs by a certain class. If they were loyal to their homes, their husbands and their sex, they would be content to do their rightful share in the world's work, and to create politics to their husbands and brothers.

Further, a woman is too capricious to be penetrate deeper.

First you must consult your corset fitter. As but madame must see it she will know you a corset which, of you figure, is the reply.

And then the secret comes out. After all, it is not in the corset, but the way it is put on. It is very long, of course with the one.

Of course it must be a very long corset, reaching quite to the lower edge of the flesh, and go some inches. Then it is pushed up, filling out the waist line.

But if you have a tall you have a with no very decided curves. And it is considered a beauty, some thing not to be fashionable, concealed—a slender at the place where the waist line used to come to stay something.

But if you have a tall you have a with no very decided curves. And it is fitted seated, so that it may be pulled down to the fashionable waistline and fastened at the lower edge of the corset. Then it is pulled up, filling out the waist line.

PREPAREDNESS THE BEST INSURANCE AGAINST WAR

It is difficult for highly civilized, peace-loving American citizens to realize that there is a probability of war being forced on the country, but a careful consideration of exact facts will convince intelligent men that such a probability exists.

When the situation is understood there can be nothing left for reasoning human beings to do but to make adequate preparation for war, especially as that is apparently the one way in which there lies any hope of preventing war.

The purpose of this article is not to alarm, but merely to draw public attention to a serious situation and attempt to dispel petty partisan prejudices in the consideration of a matter of such vital importance to the nation.

To begin with, it should be remembered that Japan has grown great by war, and has become a sort of pirate among nations. She has emerged from each war with large accessions of territory, and she now regards war as a profitable profession, and looks upon the United States much as the buccaneers of the sixteenth century looked upon the peaceful and powderous gold-laden galleons of Spain.

The United States offers much opportunity for plunder, and Japan believes she would be greatly advantaged by war with America.

There is, therefore, greed to provoke war, and in addition there is the pride of victory in her recent contests, and the irritation that must arise from the inevitable conflict on our western shores of two civilizations fundamentally different and absolutely irreconcilable.

War will not come through any dispute over the Philippines, although Japan is eager for the Philippines and fully realizes that the possession of those islands would almost double her power and make her almost twice as formidable an antagonist for this country as she now is.

War will not come from the expansion of this country in the East, but from expansion of Japan in the West.

War may be averted if this country retains Hawaii and the Philippines, builds an adequate fleet to protect them, and confines Japan to her own shores; but the sale or cession of Hawaii and the Philippines to Japan would merely extend Japan's empire to our own doors, make that nation more confident and insolent, and make war not only more difficult to avoid, but more difficult to wage.

This newspaper declares itself heartily in support of the administration's present policy regarding the navy and Japan, but reserves the right to say that when President Roosevelt interfered to prevent Russia from taming Japan, he delegated that particular piece of work to the United States of America.

This country has many and important matters of immediate concern to itself to attend to, and it is to be hoped that the administration will hereafter attend to them and not again spectacularly intervene to divert to us the troubles which beset others.

But, whether hastened by President Roosevelt or not, the Japanese question is here and must be considered. A race conflict is beginning on the western shores of our continent and must be dealt with. In dealing with it, the importance of it, the tendency of it and the probable result of it must be realized not only by our statesmen, but by our citizens, who, as a court of last resort, control the acts of our Government.

The problem is not merely national; it is not merely continental; it is racial.

The conflict extends not only along our western coast, but into British Columbia and beyond our shores to far-off Australia.

Wherever the white man has gone he has populated and cultivated the country, developed its resources, created its wealth and established a high civilization and a high standard of living.

He will not submit to his civilization, his system of society, being destroyed by civilization and a system of society that is different in its treatment of men, different in its treatment of women, and different in its treatment of everything that pertains to men and women.

He will not submit to having his standard of living undermined, his standard of morality lowered.

If England should continue to insist upon importing Japanese and Chinese and East Indians into her colonies, and compelling her own sons to come into competition with Oriental labor, and into contact with Oriental conditions, she shall lose Canada and Australia as sure as she lost the United States of America.

And let America—to paraphrase Patrick Henry's words—profit by her example.

Of course, there is no possibility of sedition or disloyalty in our country.

Our Western people are loyal to the core, as loyal as Easterners, as loyal as the Northerners, as loyal as Southerners, for, throughout this great country to-day, men of all classes, men of all sects, men of all sections, stand as brothers, heart to heart and hand in hand.

Our Western brothers are loyal to us; let us, then, be loyal to them, and not punish them for their loyalty.

Westward the course of empire takes its way, and our citizens on the shores of the Pacific are in the advance guard of that march of empire, on the firing line, protecting for us the ideas, the conditions of living, the system of civilization we have labored centuries to establish.

Let the fleet go to the Pacific to patrol our shores, to manoeuvre in our waters there, as it manoeuvres in our waters on the Atlantic, to become properly familiar with our coast, with its resources, with its fences.

Let our fleet go to the Pacific coast of the United States of America if we please. It is our territory.

Let our fleet go to Hawaii if we please. That is our territory.

Let our fleet go to the Philippines if we please. That, too, is our territory and will continue to be.

And if ever the Stars and Stripes are hauled down from those lands, it will not be to make way for the blood-red sun of Japan, but for the bright banner of the Philippine republic.

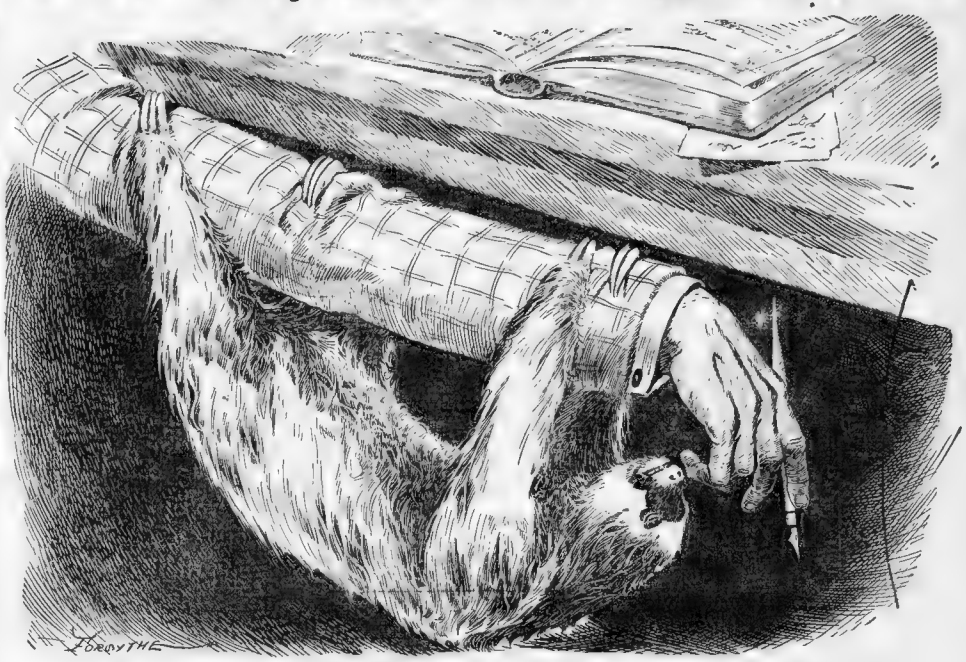
A DANGEROUS BEAST



With This Creature, THE SLOTH, to a Man's Arm, That Man's Chances Are Slim

ONE of the most pathetic and curious of living things is that strange animal, the sloth. His life is dull, his movements slow and painful, his name stands in our language for slothfulness, laziness, lack of energy.

This unhappy creature, spending his life head downward, belongs to the big family of assorted animals destined to fill all corners of our round, whirling earth-home.

There is life everywhere in our wonderful earth. Live fishes live in the sea, live worms in the ground, live birds in the air, animals of all kinds on the earth's surface, hound ng monkeys and other creatures ON the limbs of trees, and this poor creature, the sloth, hanging head downward UNDER the limbs. He travels, sleeps and eats with feet pointed toward the sky.

Occasionally one of these animals falls to the ground, or climbs down from his tree in the course of his travels. It is pathetic to watch him when he reaches the ground. He can barely creep along. And as he goes he mutters moaning, complaining cries that are pitiful.

So much for the living sloth, with his queer, hook-like claws, and his strange, upside down existence. We talk of him here, and picture him here hanging to the arm of a man, by way of introducing a sermon on human sloths.

How many human beings travel through life as the unhappy sloth travels along the ground—slowly, painfully, whimpering, whining, complaining and unhappy?

How many would like to achieve something, get ahead, produce results—yet cannot make the needed effort?

HOW MANY OF US HAVE ONE OF THESE SLOTHS HOOKED TO OUR ARM, HOLDING DOWN THE WORKING HAND?

The trouble with all of us in this world is that we do not appreciate or understand that which we cannot actually SEE. No man WANTS to be lazy, sluggish, slothful. Every man, if he had an actual animal like this hanging to his arm, would struggle endlessly until he succeeded in shaking it off. Looking down and seeing the monster holding his hand, keeping him back, he would fight, and in the end he would free himself from it.

But the sloth that clutches so many of us, that holds the tens of millions back while a few go ahead, is THE INVISIBLE SLOTH. We don't see it, we can't clutch it, or fight it physically. It stays with us, checking development, preventing success, just as thoroughly as if it were an actual four-footed heavy alum !

This picture will do no good unless the reader of this editorial stops and thinks about APPLYING IT TO HIS OWN INDIVIDUAL CASE. You must remember that slothfulness attacks not only the little men, but the second-class men. You may happen to be one of the world's really important and energetic people, but even then you cannot be sure that the sloth has no grip upon you. You can't be sure that you wouldn't be going faster, and in the end travel farther, if you could see and fight the peculiar kind of laziness, inertia, that attacks YOU. For this load of inactivity takes many forms and fights men in many ways. The greatest of men have had their moments when the grip of the sloth has held them down. If Napoleon hadn't wasted time dilly-dallying in Russia, he might not have had Moscow burned over his head, with the dreadful retreat that followed and that blasted him. If he hadn't hesitated and remained inactive in Paris after his greatest defeat, he might still have made the struggle that he alone knew how to make, and he might have gone back to his throne instead of going to St. Helena. Napoleon's inactivity, it is true, attacked him toward the end of his life, a life that had such power and energy as no other man's career has equalled.

Laziness comes from the stomach at least as often as from the brain. Napoleon ill treated, neglected and abused his stomach during all of his short life. He thought fifteen minutes too much time to give to his dinner, and as a result he gave a good deal more time than that to St. Helena. And that despised stomach killed him in the end, with dreadful suffering, after it had broken down his nervous force and made the greatest human engine a vacillating, uncertain thing.

Mental laziness has ruined and cut off many a promising career. If Antony hadn't dawdled away HIS time telling Cleopatra how extremely attractive he thought her, the famous quotation might have read "Imperial TONY, dead and turned to clay, might stop a hole to keep the wind away," instead of "Imperial Caesar."

Each of us needs to study his own particular case and find out just what part slothfulness plays in HIS inability to get ahead in the world, or to get ahead fast enough.

We must realize in the first place that, with some men, lack of opportunity, lack of proper environment plays a great part.

The sloth is unhappy, whining and pathetic only WHEN HE IS UPON THE GROUND. For he was not MADE to walk upon the ground. He can do it, he does it sometimes through necessity, but that is not what he was built for.

When he is up in the trees, head downward, traveling upside down, as Nature intended, he covers space with reasonable rapidity; he finds the food that was intended for him; his hooked feet are reliable and safe, and he is as happy as it is possible for such a creature to be, and as active as it is possible for him to be.

A good many men in their present occupations are like the sloth upon the ground. They have work that does not suit them, surroundings that kill enthusiasm and interest.

One of the greatest inventors that ever lived, who gave to humanity wonderful discoveries, was intended for farming. Luckily he made it clear that that wasn't the way he intended to travel. And they put him at something else, put him to studying. As a result, that quiet boy, who might have been one of the unknown human sloths, opened up wonderful fields of cosmic study.

If you find that you are not making your mark, don't BEGIN by taking it for granted that you are at the wrong kind of work. We can't all be astronomers, or North Pole explorers, or drivers of automobiles at a hundred miles an hour—we can't ALL do the exciting things in this world.

The trouble with the average failure or slow-mover among us is simple, plain, ordinary LAZINESS. Of course, we are not willingly or deliberately lazy. We should like to succeed, to have the world's reward and the world's applause, but we act like those poor negroes that you read about afflicted with the sleeping sickness and finally killed by it. It seems as though we could not rouse ourselves, could not compel ourselves to make that extra effort which means the difference between success and failure.

We should begin by criticising ourselves, doubting ourselves, blowing ourselves. But we should also be awake to opportunities of chance and to the benefits that come with change.

There is nothing worse for a human being than A RUT.

If you are working in a rut, you will do well to get out of it, even though you begin again for less pay and under less encouraging conditions. The moment the mind begins acting in a routine way, with no fresh thought, growth has stopped, and you might as well give up hope.

The rolling stone gathers no moss, but it has often been mentioned that a stone doesn't REQUIRE moss. And a rolling stone at least is more interesting than a stone that sticks in one place and collects moss only. Don't be a rolling stone forever, but if you are in a bad place now, roll out of it, and look for a better place, even though it may be for the time a less profitable place.

Study the opportunities that are offered in newspaper advertisements and in the business world around you.

The laziest, dullest man wakes up wonderfully quick. If you throw him into the cold water, where it is deep, he begins to swim, or at least begins to kick and struggle without a second's hesitation. Most of us need to be thrown into cold water, to have some sudden shock, to have activity forced upon us, and if we cannot force ourselves into activity where we are, we should change and be active elsewhere.

That's enough of a Sunday sermon on laziness. It isn't much of a sermon, and it will be utterly useless to millions of people that see this editorial page unless those people rewrite the editorial in their own minds as they go along. You know YOUR OWN INDIVIDUAL CASE. You know what is the matter with you. It is for you to look at this picture, to study yourself, to realize that you have a brain like others, that there are as many days in your year as in the year of another man, that there are as many opportunities before you as before the other unknown man who rises.

It is for you to realize, whether you are young or old, that somewhere near you there is a man of your age with a chance no better than yours, WHO IS GOING TO SUCCEED. Why should you let that man succeed rather than succeed yourself? Why not both succeed—there is plenty of chance for all.

Not far from you, at your own age, with just as many handicaps as you have, with no better start than you have got, somebody is going to make a big success.

Shake off this animal if it is hanging to your arm, and make the success yourself.

Be Thankful

by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ONE of the greatest spiritual lessons with which to fill up the crevices in our paths and open the storehouse of life's treasures is a really thankful heart.

Perhaps you say you are thankful for your blessings. But HOW thankful are you? And how many times a day do you send forth a thought of gratitude? Look carefully over your list of real blessings, things which you would not be willing to part with, and then ask yourself how many times a year you send up a heartfelt prayer of thanks for these blessings.

It is a question if you who read these lines ever give thanks in the morning that you are alive. Perhaps you will reply that you do not want to live. You are tired of life, and do not think it worth while. Yet were you to hear that an epidemic had broken out in the house where you dwell, you would flee from it. And if you were on a boat that was in danger of sinking, you would dash for a life preserver among the first. So you must really be thankful for life; and if you are, you should say so each morning. The Great Power that gave you life loves to know that you appreciate it. However material you may be in your beliefs, you cannot explain the CAUSE of the marvellous creation. Nature? Who made Nature?

Who made the gases and forces which set Nature to work?

A COLOSSAL INTELLIGENCE. This Intelligence takes many forms, visible and invisible. This intelligence permeates the mighty universe, and there are vast throngs of great friends about us, who are ever glad and eager to hear our words of appreciation for the gift of life. It puts them in closer touch with us and enables them to aid us. If you have a home, however humble, give thanks for that. Just in the measure that you appreciate it, and love it, will the way be opened for you to make it the ideal home you carry in your mind. If you have employment offer thanks and put yourself joyfully into your task.

Perhaps it may not be the work you desire, perhaps you long for a more congenial task. Then the surest way in the world to obtain that desire is by going about what you have to do with a right good will, and thanking the Giver of all things that you have SOMETHING to do, and at the same time sending out a demand for the better work that you feel you are fitted to perform.

The whiner and complainer never betters his lot.

However menial your task, you can elevate it by your way of looking at it. The scrub woman, the laundress, the street cleaner, are they not IMPORTANT to the comfort and health of modern civilization? If your work is among these, BE THANKFUL FOR YOUR USEFULNESS.

Permit no one to pity you, or to look down on you. They will not if you do not look down on yourself. Instead of self-pity, thank God for your good fortune in having something to do. After a time you will have more agreeable tasks to perform.

He that is faithful in little will be en trusted with much

Be thankful that you have health, once you resolve to offer thanks for its possession, how ever ailing you may be, health will come to you. Learn to breathe. Right breathing and right thinking are all you need for health. If you do not know how to breathe, get a book and study it.

When you see anything beautiful in nature or art, offer thanks for the privilege. It is a privilege to look on a park, a tree, a lovely face, a sweet child, a picture or beautiful garments in the shop windows. It is a privilege to read and hear music, and to see the sky, and to talk with friends, and to sleep at night.

Every day is filled with marvellous privileges for those who look for them. The more closely you look, the more wonderful things you will find which are worthy your thanks.

Pleasures and benefits and blessings will increase if you put yourself in a grateful and appreciative attitude of mind. Friends will increase if you are grateful and appreciative of those you have, instead of being overcritical and faultfinding.

Start in to-day and resolve to offer up thanks for life, breath, work, friends and health at least three times each day. Just close your eyes, concentrate your thoughts and give a moment to this little prayer of gratitude. You can do it anywhere—on the street, in the shop, in the car.

The message will be received, as it goes by the wireless. And there will return to you messages of happiness, increased power, new opportunities and blessings.

Pray without ceasing.

I DO not undertake to say
That literal answers come from heaven,
But this I know—that when I pray
A comfort, a support, is given
That helps me rise o'er earthly things
As larks soar up on airy wings.

IN vain the wise philosopher
Points out to me my fabric's flaws;
In vain the scientists aver
That all things are controlled by laws.
My life has taught me, day by day,
That it availeth much to pray.

I DO not stop to reason out
The why or how. I do not care,
Since I know this—that when I doubt
Life seems a blackness of despair,
The world a tomb; and when I trust
Sweet blossoms spring up in the dust.

SINCE I know in the darkest hour,
If I lift up my soul in prayer,
Some sympathetic, loving power
Sends hope and comfort to me there—
Since balm is dropped to ease my pain—
What need to argue or explain?

PRAYER has a sweet, refining grace;
It educates the soul and heart;
It lends a halo to the face,
And by its elevating art
It gives the mind an inner sight
That brings it near the Infinite.

FROM our gross selves it helps us rise
To something which we yet may be;
And so I ask not to be wise,
If thus my faith is lost to me—
Faith, that, with angel voice and touch,
Says, "Pray, for prayer availeth much."

What Constitutes Happiness? By Dr. Emil Reich

Dr. Emil Reich.

WHAT each and every one of us wishes for in life is the realization of as many as possible of the deep-seated desires for health, love, honor and power which men have always held as the highest good of life.

Some people make good one of these great hopes—health. Others are able to secure love, or honor, or both, while others again succeed in only one—power.

Under these four headings come yet many other objects of ambition, of hope, of success. Some people, although desirous of success, yet restrict themselves to success in love; and of love there are many kinds. There is love paternal, conjugal, pre or post conjugal, platonic love proper, or love of knowledge in the highest—love of God.

Even so it is with honor and power, but, whatever the sub-divisions may be, it may be stated with fair completeness that the four great desires just mentioned contain all the elements conducive to happiness.

These four desires are fundamental; they are the essence of Man, and whether he is to realize them or not depends not on luck, as many profess but on his own will and energy.

Health is mostly a matter of common sense. Nature is distinctly British, in that she does not like to be interfered with or to be annoyed by questions. She wants to be left alone, in "splendid isolation." She has an ugly knack of hitting back hard, and the more we listen to her the more we shall have reason to be thankful to her. Too many people are desperately fond of browbeating Nature, of despising the grand old lady, of sneering at her. It never pays. We can no more jump outside Nature than ever our own heads.

Of the health or integrity of honor, it may perhaps be said that it is, if possible even more important than physical health. By honor we here do not mean only common moral integrity—that is, that one must not steal or lie. This is too self-evident. We mean that healthy relation to ourselves and to other people which does not admit of that curse of modern life, of false positions. A great French Socialist thinker used to say that "property is theft." It was replied to him that, in that case, "honesty will steal no longer." To honesty—by which here we mean resolute rejecting of all temptations to fall into a false position—is one of the most solid constants of success. Any attempt to take half measures, to remain in a post which is half charity, half business; to do what one distinctly hates doing; to use the Yankee phrase, to have a beer income and champagne tastes; any protracted relation to a woman whom one really does not love; all this, and a thousand similar things, are to be left alone. All such attempts to lead a double life, to lead a life of double truth, to lead a life of double faith, are contrary to the most elementary rules of psychology. Nature will have her revenge. Nature will not be cheated. Nature will not be mocked. Nature will not be trifled with. Nature will not be played with. Nature will not be lied to. Nature will not be sneered at. Nature will not be laughed at. Nature will not be scoffed at. Nature will not be jested with. Nature will not be ridiculed. Nature will not be derided. Nature will not be mocked. Nature will not be scorned. Nature will not be despised. Nature will not be contemned. Nature will not be disdained. Nature will not be flouted. Nature will not be insulted. Nature will not be outraged. Nature will not be violated. Nature will not be defiled. Nature will not be profaned. Nature will not be desecrated. Nature will not be blasphemed. Nature will not be abused. Nature will not be misused. Nature will not be maltreated. Nature will not be ill-treated. Nature will not be misjudged. Nature will not be misunderstood. Nature will not be misinterpreted. Nature will not be misconstrued. Nature will not be misrepresented. Nature will not be misconceived. Nature will not be misapprehended. Nature will not be misinformed. Nature will not be misled. Nature will not be misguided. Nature will not be misdirected. Nature will not be misadvised. Nature will not be misinstructed

Plenty of Laughs at Theatres in Boston This Week.

Four Stars in Three New Plays; Nearly Every House Changes Its Bill.

THERE will be plenty of opportunity for laughter at the local theatres this week. Three new plays come to town, with four favorite players. Two of the plays have made hune successes in New York, while the third is an entirely new production, which critics in other cities have praised very highly. There are changes at every other theatre in town, with one exception, and the week bids fair to be the liveliest and most interesting of the present season. Here are the facts about the various attractions.

DOG PANTOMIMISTS IN VAUDEVILLE

It is all right to say that dogs have no sense of reasoning power, but the fact remains that they do reason. And it is one of the strongest arguments that can be used against the theory that dogs are dumb brutes.

But what may people say after they see Barnold's canine and simian performers? Trainer Barnold has taught his animals to do almost everything but talk, and he is working on that.

Mr. Barnold's lesson in reasoning is that his animals do, and that is the proof of the pudding. Watch the animals on the stage and you will see that they are reasoning in the most human way. When Bowser, the bull terrier, is told to open the door, he does it. When Bowser is told to close the door, he does it. There is no trainer's whip or command through the use of which Bowser is made to do it.

Dog Acts Inebriated.

Not a Word Spoken.

Next comes a dog nurse who has a baby to look after. She is so fond of it that she takes it to bed with her. In the course of the night the baby begins to cry. The nurse gets up and feeds the baby from a bottle. She then puts the baby back in the cradle and goes to sleep. The baby cries again

Stage Notes

Ralph Santon, the Boston boy, who is now appearing with the Murray Hoved repertoire company, has been making a distinct success. He possesses all the requisites for a good actor and is forging rapidly to the front.

Marcus La Blanche, who became famous in his support of Mansfield, Modjeska, Mantell and the other big stars, has been visiting friends in Boston this week.

Two big features on next Cheek's bill at the Orpheum will be Charmion, the trapeze performer, who has become an international sensation, and Raffin's Monkeys, one of whom does an imitation of Charmion's disrobing act. Both acts are wood famous, but next week at the Orpheum will be the first time that they have ever appeared together on the same bill.

Lawrence D'Orsay, co-star with Cecilia Loftus in "The Lancers," at the Majestic Theatre, was married during the Summer to Madeline Lee, of Louisville's favorite actor families. The bride is the niece of Sidney Lee, citizen Rose Coghlan, and Mrs. Lee is a sister of Lillian Lee, who for many years was known in the history of the organization as Lillian Lee and Her Gilded Sword, which he wears in "The Lancers," is one among the properties the comedian retained on his return from abroad.

A stock of dynamite plays an important part in "The Lancers," which Cecilia Loftus and Lawrence D'Orsay will present at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, next week. In one scene represents a saw mill in operation. The smartest trick Cecilia Loftus has ever known in the history of the organization. A living rug and a gilded sword, which he wears in "The Lancers," is one among the properties the comedian retained on his return from abroad.

The Lancers, of which George Wilson is a member, will open next week on the evening, and will bring their performance to Boston after a successful run of some four months in Chicago. The Lancers is a story of the Indian days in the Northwest, and the production is said to be one of pageantry that is indescribable.

* * *

Jean Lange, whose appearance with the Elliott and Gilbert Stock Company at the Castle Square Theatre has been the occasion for much favorable comment on the professional work she has done, will open next week at the Hollis Street Theatre. John Sumpolis is also in the company.

* * *

The new front of Austin & Stone's Museum is a very prominent and prominent feature. It is easily the most conspicuous thing in Pleasant Square. The entire front of the building has been done over in white, and the signs are in gold with touches of green. New electric signs with the name of "Austin & Stone's" at night.

Schoeffel Says That "Advanced Vaudeville" Stays

The Tremont is not going to close. Manager Schoeffel says it isn't, and here's what business Manager Sheehan says of the story which has gained circulation this week:

"Political enterprises, more than any other business, can be especially accepted by the theatre individuals who go about in every direction with the haunted look of the hunted man, but like to strike a blow, however feeble or serious, so long as they can make it as strong as you please, outlawed Mr. Schoeffel's Advanced Vaudeville is to continue at the Tremont, and that Boston is to see more of it than at the present time, in spite of rumors to the contrary, it has made a success of it in the past months and in the financial history of this city which is to designate them as Advanced Vaudeville is here to stay."

Fashion Greets Bride at Church in Flowery Bower

[illegible]

Daughter of Late U. S. Senator Weds English Knight

Be for the most brilliant wedding ever solemnized on the North Shore was that yesterday noon at Manchester-by-the-Sea of Miss Amy McMillan, the handsome and distinguished daughter of the late Senator James McMillan, of Michigan, to Sir John Harrington, of London, England.

The ceremony was performed at Pleasant Hall, the summer home of the bride's father, and was followed by a reception at the home of Mrs. Wetmore in Bay State road. Many New Yorkers were present, as the bride's mother was a New York girl before her marriage to Senator McMillan, and New York society has been much interested in the engagement. The bridal party arrived at Manchester by special train from Boston, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Percy Grant, of New York, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, of Groton, Mass. [illegible]

The bride was handsomely gowned in white satin and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. [illegible]

Among those present from New York were Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMillan, of New York; Mrs. William McMillan, Mr. and Mrs. Percy McMillan, of Detroit; Mrs. William McMillan, of St. Louis, and Frank L. Polk, of New York.

Beware of the "Lady Killer!"

By Beatrice Fairfax

WOMEN do not admire the [illegible] type of [illegible]. He is a good fellow, as a rule, but [illegible] as a man is to him.

The very way he looks at a woman [illegible] and it's not [illegible] admiration.

He is cruel to a degree, and that is the [illegible] girls who know no better than to [illegible] to his [illegible].

He is [illegible] and [illegible] gets [illegible].

But I refer to [illegible] he is not [illegible] the normal, whole [illegible] of the man.

The man that [illegible] to be a flirt at [illegible] does not [illegible] does put his [illegible] to [illegible] in it once [illegible] and say the wrong thing in the wrong place. She does not want him to have the finesse of a woman.

Despise Male Flirts

MEN despise a woman who makes eyes and flirts with strange men. This being the case, why should they expect a woman to admire the man who ogles every pretty woman he sees?

Perhaps the man who persists in [illegible] a woman in this way expects her to take his odious attentions as a compliment. If he only knew it, she loathed him and his ways as he would mend them.

No woman cares for the man who looks as though he were only good as a drawing room ornament and to say pretty things.

She wants him to be strong and fearless and to talk about real things; not rest to pay her silly, meaningless compliments.

Some men have an idea that woman likes to be treated [illegible] as a pet plaything. She does not. She wants to be treated as though she had some mind and will of her own, and as though she were an intelligent human being.

Of course, she likes a man to be gentle and [illegible] toward her, but at the same time she wants him to treat her as a woman, not as a doll.

Masterful Man Wins

YOUR true woman has no desire to be masterful. Even the few strong-minded ones who are inclined that way would be different if they had [illegible] to do with real men. But as a rule you will find the [illegible] minded woman is married to an [illegible] and [illegible] of a man. Some one has to be masterful, and she is the stronger of the twain, takes it to [illegible].

Not for a moment do I believe in women losing [illegible] and [illegible] because [illegible] is natural that a man should be the stronger of the two, and [illegible] should respect his strength.

And she does, if he be manly and honorable, but if he is nothing but a good-looking, well-dressed dummy she de-

HUB EATING HOUSES MUST RAISE RATES OR CLOSE THEIR DOORS

Big Increase in Prices of Food Stuffs Necessitates Advance to Patrons; Boarding House Mistresses Talk of Organizing Union; Two Meals a Day.

THE hotel and restaurants of Boston intend to raise the price of meals. Some of them have already boosted it, and the blow is now coming all along the line. The increased prices of food stuffs, which have already fallen heavily upon the household, will now be taxed also upon the man who buys his meals as he goes.

This is the latest move in the distribution of the burden of the increased cost of living in Boston. First, the wholesalers felt it. They immediately handed it on to the retailer, and the large consumer. The retailer at once turned it over to the householder, and now the large consumer—the hotel man—is delivering his part of it to his customers.

Raise or Close.

"We haven't raised our prices yet, and George R. Hall, manager of the Adams House, "but you can wager that we are going to do so, else we shall have to close up the house.

"This is a matter that most of the other hotels and restaurants will have also to face with the present. Many of them are afraid to raise the rates for fear of losing their trade. But some of them have already done so.

"Up to now the hotel and restaurant men have no real idea of what food prices would reach. Some of the staples have doubled in price, and the end is not yet. The cost of coffee, however, is now coming to stay.

Forced to Action.

The hotel and restaurant managers protest that the increase in the cost of living rates has been forced upon them. Wherever prices of the commodities they serve have increased from forty to fifty per cent, the decision, while it brings changes to the public, has not been arrived at hastily. "The public will be quick to realize the travelling public will be quick to realize the travelling public will be quick to realize the travelling

FIND ROBERTS GUILTY; FACES LIFE TERM IN PRISON.

Maine Slayer Sinks Into Chair as Jury Makes Known His Fate.

ROUSED FROM SLUMBER

Counsel at Once Enter Appeal in Battle for New Trial.

HOULTON, Me., Oct. 12.—Jack Roberts was declared guilty of the murder of Edgar Dickinson at Smyrna Mills a year ago at 10:25 to-night, after the twelve men had been out over ten hours.

Judge Emery immediately sentenced Roberts to life imprisonment.

Roberts did not collapse when the verdict was announced, but his face showed that he had expected something different. He held on to the railing of the prisoner's cage and sank slowly into his seat when Foreman McDonald announced the result. His face became deathly white and without his glasses he made an uncanny picture.

Only the court officials, the attorneys and the newspaper men were in the court room when the verdict was announced.

The jury stood 10 to 2 for conviction on the first ballot and the most of the ten hours they were out was spent in winning over the two for a verdict.

Immediately after Roberts's conviction, his lawyers served notice of appeal.

Roused From Slumber.

An hour before they came in the jury made it known that they would reach a verdict. A little time Roberts was asleep in the jail. He was aroused by Deputy Sheriff Bryan and all that his face would show he did.

"It doesn't make much difference to me what they do," he said as he walked across the corridor.

The case was given to the jury by Judge Emery at noon.

During the recess in the trial at the time of his counsel's most impassioned appeals, Attorney Ira G. Hersey, one of Roberts's counsel, was seen to wipe away a tear. Dickinson, it will be remembered, was a brother-in-law of the former's wife.

Mrs. Dickinson in Court.

In another seat in the court room and in full view of Roberts sat Mrs. Dickinson, who lost a few months ago her husband's brother, Edgar Dickinson, by the shotgun route. Mrs. Dickinson was the only woman in the court room during the trial of the case. Her presence in the court room was noticed by all, and it was thought that the presence of the woman who was the sister of the murdered man would have a telling effect on the jury, but it did not.

Attorney General Barrows opened his argument, which he had begun before the jury yesterday afternoon, at 10:45 this morning.

"This man has lied to you gentlemen of the jury," he asserted in opening his argument for the State. "He has told you that he has told such conflicting stories that it is impossible to tell when he has been lying and when he has been telling the truth.

"But his lies about the shooting are easy to see. They are absurd on the face of them. The State has by every one produced such intelligent and unbiased witnesses, and the straits to which Roberts has been driven are shown by the abuse to which these witnesses have been subjected by Attorney Skehan.

"The State has shown you motive and opportunity for the crime. The educated and the ignorant, the poor and ignorant, the rich and prominent, are all alike when passion once gets the better of them.

Stocks at Lowest Mark of Year Under a Flood of Selling

Panic Averted Only Because of Brief Duration of the Market Session.

A tremendous flood of selling orders inundated the stock market yesterday and submerged prices to their lowest levels of the year. Already battered and weakened by previous days of disaster, stocks were forced down on the verge of going demoralized, but when the gong sounded the end of the session at 3 o'clock the market was saved only because the panic was of two hours' duration.

The final prevailing prices were the lowest of the year by an average of $2 a share, and the unprecedented figure of over three billions of dollars in the New York list of stocks. In Boston, the copper stocks alone, after yesterday's disastrous break, show a shrinkage in market values this year of over $50,000,000. It was not an isolated decline, but the third successive break of the week. AIMING all their fight on the Feeney-Kiley pink ticket of admission, the Whitney faction laid their trump card on the table last night and declared with great positiveness that with the official call for the State convention and the official credential card before them, the Ballot Law Commission can under no circumstances find General Charles W. The offic[illegible] at call, issued in August and put in evidence yesterday, warned everybody that admission to the convention would be "by credentials only."

The first line on each credential card promised, further, that "this credential admits to convention hall."

CATARRHAL ASTHMA

Very Common in October. [illegible]

Mrs. Samuel Shipman, East Delaware, O.

"We Have Used" Pe-ru-na in Our Home for Years. My Aged Father Used it for Asthma and I Took it for Catarrh. I can Recommend it Highly to all for These Diseases."
Mrs. Samuel Shipman.

THERE is a form of asthma very common to be used for so many seasons prevalent during the autumn months. It sometimes comes on much like hay fever, but lasts until will necessarily [illegible] of the the first frost. This form of asthma bodily derangement set up by ca is likely not to trouble the patient [illegible] except in the autumn months.

It seems to [illegible] upon a catarrhal condition of the [illegible] tubes and lungs.

This catarrhal condition renders the bronchial tubes very sensitive to irritations. Inhalations of pollen, or dust of any sort, are almost sure to produce a spasmodic condition of the smaller bronchial tubes with [illegible] difficult breathing [illegible]

A person with perfectly sound healthy mucous membranes of the respiratory organs is not likely to have an attack. Only those persons who have catarrhal irritation of the mucous membranes have any fear of this form of asthma.

People subject to asthma in the fall should recognize the cause of their difficulty to be catarrh.

Any remedy that will relieve catarrhal conditions will often avert the paroxysm of asthma.

Quite a number of [illegible] have taken Peruna for this [illegible] and have found by experience [illegible] does prevent the [illegible] of asthma.

We do not recommend Peruna as a remedy for true asthma. Peruna relieves only those cases dependent upon catarrh as above described.

Peruna is a tonic [illegible] combined with success. People who only, and that [illegible] object to liquid medicines can now secure as is well known to the up-to-date [illegible] cure Peruna tablets, which represent [illegible] been necessary. Peruna is a [illegible] drug things even in politics and that [illegible] was certainly realized by Bartlett people at the convention.

Asthma in Worst Form.

Mr. W. M. Harp, Route [illegible], Troy, Ohio, writes:

"I am going to write to [illegible] in what Peruna has done for me and what it has done.

I was about to [illegible] in the worst form asthma [illegible] The last [illegible] I [illegible] would [illegible] and almost [illegible] and would cough and almost [illegible]

My mother [illegible] that I should take Peruna, and I [illegible] with [illegible] and never failed to do all I [illegible]

Now, when I or any of my little [illegible] a cough we [illegible] take Peruna and never fail to do all I [illegible]

I often wanted to write you [illegible] and for Peruna, but have [illegible] the time before. I hope [illegible] may prosper and live [illegible]

Peruna in Tablet Form.

For [illegible] years Dr Hartman and his [illegible] constantly laboured [illegible] Peruna in tablet form, and [illegible] Peruna tablets have just been [illegible] with success. People who [illegible] object to liquid medicines can now secure [illegible] Peruna tablets, which represent [illegible] ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

MERGER STRONGLY OPPOSED BY DEAN

Wakefield Representative Says Proposed Change Would Destroy Business.

BOTH SIDES DISCUSSED

Lynn Trade Board President Wants Consolidation as Quick as Possible.

"The control of the Boston & Albany by the New York Central shows what [illegible] the road to another will do," declared Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield to the Twentieth Century Club yesterday. "Keep the grand old principle of competition as a factor in full play. It is more useful for the public welfare than any [illegible] regulation can possibly be."

Mr. Dean was discussing the merger of the New York, New Haven & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford before 200 members of the club at the weekly dinner at No. 8 Ashburton place.

He said in part: "I think if this city have been [illegible] I continue time and again [illegible] by consenting to the Boston & Albany. That means that [illegible] and [illegible] another will do. That is what you [illegible] Now that the 1906 bill [illegible] of $50,000,000 and increased it [illegible] to $90,000,000, and after it was given to the New York Central its business [illegible] $100,000,000. Did the change benefit Massachusetts?

"Boston Would Suffer."

"In 1906, the New Haven and the Boston & Maine were [illegible] as carrying 20,000,000 tons of freight. The New Haven charged [illegible] more than the Boston & Maine did for carrying the same amount of freight. Would Boston be benefited if the New York, New Haven & Hartford [illegible] to take over the Boston & Maine, which [illegible] millions dollars?

"The New Haven Road is capitalized at $220,000,000, while the Boston & Maine is capitalized at $80,000,000. This difference in capitalization is not because of any difference of business.

"Under the Sherman act the question of monopoly, as well as competition, is a question that the United States Government has the right to decide. Are you going to destroy your business by allowing these railroads to be under one head?"

The Other Point of View.

President W. H. Treen of the Lynn Board of Trade criticised the Boston & Maine. "We cannot have anything any worse than it is now," he said. "We should like to do things, but the railroads won't let us. I don't blame President Tuttle, because I don't think he is for one that runs to the occasion, but I do think that President Mellen is one of the best railroad men in the country, and I think he would give us good service. What I want to see is a train stop at Lynn that you can get on and go to New York for the purposes of business. I believe we should have the merger as soon as possible."

Sylvester Baxter, a member of the club, said he favored the merger. He said that the New York, New Haven & Hartford is the idea of the Boston & Maine, and said: "I do not see [illegible] if this merger does not take effect."

Henry Long, president of the Western Club, said: "The West is not so much interested in the merger. They would like to do business with Boston, but Boston does not want to do business with them. Boston a business [illegible] to the North, West to the South, and when you get ready we [illegible] we can ship freight cheaper than New York even can."

MELLEN TO BARE MERGER SECRETS

New Haven President to Confer With Government Officials on B. & M. Deal.

READY TO MEET PURDY

President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, it was announced last night, is ready to "tell all" to the United States Government in regard to the Mellen plan to merge the Boston & Maine Railroad into the New Haven system.

At New Haven last night Mr. Mellen declined to talk.

The statement that he is getting ready to tell all was given out by Assistant Attorney-General Mc A. Purdy who, after a conference in Boston with United States Attorney-General Bonaparte, left yesterday afternoon for Washington. Mr. Purdy was informed prior to Mr. Mellen's decision to tell all that the Government desired to know the whole situation before it would consider the same favorably.

Not Competing Lines.

Mr. Mellen will insist, it is said, as was to have been expected, that the New Haven and the Boston & Maine are not in any serious sense competing roads. Being both owned by the same people, they are simply the channels of travel. How well on the merging of two such lines.

Things have been moving swiftly in the Federal government's investigation of the big New England railroad merger since on August 22 last, the Hubbard Act, a statute of Massachusetts, the legislative Committee, filed its report. Since then Attorney French, who was retained in the case for the government, has

The United States District Attorney took up the matter with Attorney-General Bonaparte, and is ready here looking into the Purdy matter. Several conferences between Mr. French and Governor Bonaparte and Governor Guild of the Independence League's executive committee.

Information From League.

Chairman MacFarland's information included a stenographic report of the testimony taken in the merger case last June before the Committee on Railroads at the State House.

The Federal Department of Justice took up the probe and on Thursday last District Attorney French was in Boston in conference at the Touraine with Milton D. Purdy of Attorney General Bonaparte's staff.

Purdy came to Boston because of the expressed approval of Mr. French's work by President Roosevelt. His conference with District Attorney French came on the day after the annual meeting of the Boston & Maine at Lowell.

ENTERPRISE HOME, PRAISE FOR CADETS

Big Crowd on Pier Welcome Boys as Training Ship Lands Them.

Many were the affecting scenes on the pier at North End Park when the fifty-five cadets of the training ship Enterprise landed after a three-months' cruise to Europe.

As the barges arrived alongside of the pier, mothers, fathers, sweethearts and sisters were waiting for loved ones. Each one will have a months leave of absence, and during that time the ship will be overhauled and made ready preparatory for the Winter's training.

With a few exceptions nothing but words of praise were expressed for the officers and the food. The latter was noted when the ship was lasting to the side off the coast of Ireland and the boys were unable to keep anything on the stoves.

Commander Praises Boys.

In speaking of the cruise, Capt. Low said: "Without exception, this is the finest class of boys that I ever sailed with. The food was good and the boys said they wanted to eat. On our way home we experienced a gale, and the boys that I ever experienced. The ship and cadets came out in good shape and I'm happy. I only wish we could have had a longer cruise."

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 12.—Chance's Champions of the World finished their brilliant 2 to 0 victory today over Detroit that clinched the world's pennant exhibition in all respects a finer and superior one than in any of the preceding games in which the American League champions in every department of the game showed that they had the class and they won by clever base-running, by which [illegible] scored deep in the [illegible] Mullin

FACED HUNGER ON $5 A WEEK IN FIGHT TO AID ARMY OF WORKING GIRLS.

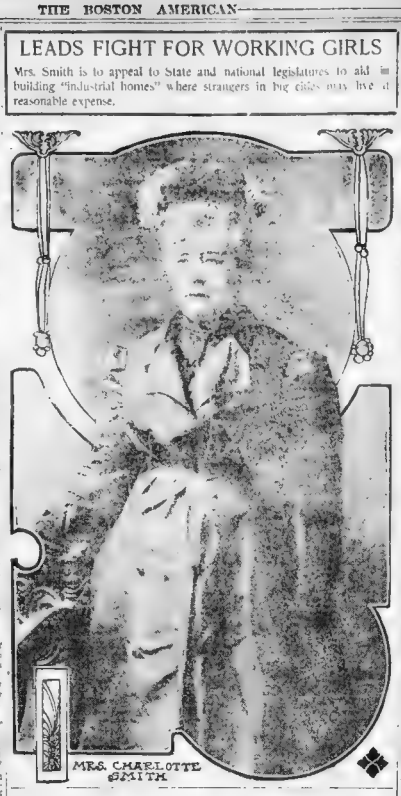
Mrs. [illegible] Smith, Boston Woman, Tests Lodging House Life.

URGES INDUSTRIAL HOMES

Will Appeal for Action by Legislature; Stat[illegible]

LEADS FIGHT FOR WORKING GIRLS

Mrs. Smith is to appeal to State and national legislatures to aid in building "industrial homes" where strangers in big cities may live at reasonable expense.



MRS. CHARLOTTE SMITH

How [illegible] coarse [illegible] My it is possible for an American working woman [illegible] pounds in weight during [illegible] experiment [illegible] Boston [illegible] chusetts [illegible] vide for [illegible] homes [illegible] she has [illegible]

By Mrs. Charlotte Smith.

I have been living in the cheapest of lodging houses and existing on food which has not cost me more than $2.50 a week for the past six months.

I have been able to demonstrate that a working woman, a woman who makes her living by clerking in a store or as an agent may live on $5 a week.

Live, I say, but not grow fat. Why, the experiment I have made has cost me 40 pounds in weight and I have aged ten years. I am sure during the past six months. And this $5 a week means a most hard and not restful time than the days I worked out.

I did this cheerfully because I wanted to make a fight for one of the great problems which confronts the ordinary working girl. I endured any kind of a lodging house that was respectable, no matter how mean it might be.

I have found that it is impossible for a woman to exist on less than $5 a week. That is, she cannot live on less and keep sound mentally and physically and be fit for her daily work.

Bravely Faces Life of Toil.

To be sure I have tried to manage to exist on less, but look at me! I have lost forty pounds and all the wrinkle eradicators in the world will not restore or erase the lines I have acquired during the past six months. And I feel that my own best friends would hardly know me.

But my plight is simple when you come to compare it with the real working woman who has no other thought than [illegible] her. For life but to endure the terrible and unequal fight to keep soul and body together. You see, I knew that at the end of a week, or a day, I could abandon my experiment. I could pick up my trunk [illegible] and make my way back to the Fifth Avenue Hotel [illegible] New York, the Arlington in Washington or the Somerset in Boston.

But the average working woman knows that there is no hope for her unless a miracle happens or until death relieves her of the awful responsibility. She must toil bravely on and smile when she feels like weeping, and save, save, save every penny she can at the time she is able to keep a roof over her head and to provide a little coarse food.

Clothing Not Included.

Now that I've worked out this problem I know a great deal more of what confronts [illegible] woman than most people do. I know that $5 a week will get her a shabby room in some undesirable section of a great city and provide her [illegible] enough to eat on. But that doesn't include her clothing.

When some [illegible] person comes to the front in [illegible] twenty cents a day, I know that that person lies or does not know what she is talking about. Such individuals, of course, [illegible] I know that [illegible] I have met [illegible] I know that [illegible] I have met more [illegible] I know that [illegible] I have met [illegible] I know that [illegible] I have met [illegible] I know that [illegible] I have met

GRAFT-COMBATING MINISTER COMES TO HELP OUT IN CLEANING HUB.

Rev. O[illegible] P. Gifford of Buffalo Accepts Pastorate of Baptist Church.

IS GREAT FOE OF VICE

Overwhelming Opposition in Buffalo Due to His Strenuous Efforts.

When [illegible] P. Gifford accepts his [illegible] the Delaware Avenue Baptist Church of Buffalo, the latter part of this month, and assumes the pastorate of the Brookline Baptist church, Buffalo will lose and Greater Boston will gain one of the most [illegible] graft and [illegible] fighters.

His [illegible] will be severely felt in his present pastorate. The eminent clergyman's heart and soul appear to be in the work of fighting political grafters and various characters.

It may be largely because of the situation that [illegible] Gifford has [illegible] relinquish the pastorate of a Buffalo church which prides itself upon the social and business distinction of the members of its congregation, [illegible] his efforts to enforce a [illegible] His work [illegible] which [illegible] to [illegible] new [illegible] at least [illegible] big fight [illegible] Brooklyn church [illegible] Gifford [illegible] by no means [illegible] the [illegible] are [illegible] he will be [illegible] resurrected [illegible] America [illegible]

[illegible] fact that he has not yet left [illegible] not inclined to make [illegible] base he intends to pursue [illegible] at the Hub, yet a [illegible] to disclose his intentions [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] that first won [illegible] and [illegible] but [illegible] fair.

I have always considered it the duty of every American citizen to fight, no matter how great the odds, for honest government, and especially the duty of the clergy upon whom the [illegible] naturally depends for aid in affairs moral—and what can be of greater importance to mankind than the overthrow of crooked politics and the riddance of desperate financiers and the establishment of honest administration?

His a Strong Hand.

It was during the [illegible] of Dr. Conrad Diehl and Erastus C. Knight that politics in Buffalo reached their lowest ebb, when the city fell into the hands of scheming Republican politicians. The evil influence was so pronounced that a reform force became the tools of the vicious class. Indeed, this influence has for roughly [illegible] the city of Buffalo, but spread to the county of Erie.

When Erastus C. Knight became Mayor, it was said that employes of city departments, school teachers and firemen received notice from a rent company in which the Mayor was interested, the inference being that it would be well for them to buy their coal of that company. Mayor's police commissioner, Doherty, was in the tea and coffee business and although nothing was received by city employes, the inference being that it would be well for them to buy their supplies of that company.

Stayed Corruption.

Never in the history of Buffalo did the gambling fiends so under the last Republican administration. The city was so wide open that "poppers" stood in front of gambling dens identified with city hall influence, captains and take a chance at craps, roulette, faro, poker or almost any game they desire. Hand books were as numerous and easy to find as cigar stores. Disorderly concert and dance hall, with drinking tables bordering the floor, ran with wide open doors and windows. Desperate characters strolled the streets day and night, so much that they might ply their trade unmolested by the police.

Responsible for the stand against all the [illegible] of the Republican [illegible] was the late [illegible] Gifford, [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] press [illegible] the [illegible] men, who had been [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the Republican [illegible] [illegible] publican [illegible] [illegible] A Democratic [illegible] [illegible] Adam was then elected [illegible]

It was [illegible] of David [illegible] Herb and [illegible] Gifford played the part of David [illegible] the Republican system and [illegible] the city spell bound. He led a force of [illegible] and at first pleaded with the officials and then [illegible] to [illegible] power.

They preached from street corners in the tenderloin and from public squares in the business section. Cubs Take Final Game at Detroit, "Three Fingered" Brown Pitching Great Ball for Wind-Up.

What the Managers Say.

BY FRANK CHANCE.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12. "I knew I'd make a clean-up and that's all even is to the story. Brown, whose arm, after two weeks in bad condition at the first six weeks of this form, but not when only two strong, a fact that we got but a cripple against Jennings's stagers in the last I independently believe that the Cubs are the super-best team. Personally, I was sorry I was not in the game myself. I should like to have been part in the game and closed up everything. The Cubs have won a world's series by clean-cut playing. We outbatted and outfielded Jennings's men.

BY HUGH JENNINGS.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12. "I put up for the people of Detroit and for myself in this city the best article of baseball that my men could play. I have played the best baseball I have in me. I have no excuses to make for the defeat. I have known that in a long series of baseball games luck must break with the best. I tried Archer this afternoon and I knew I had tried him on the other day. The little Irishman looked to be in fine fettle. It is my great regret that I cannot give Detroit the world's championship team, which the support of the public deserves.

ENGLISH HIGH'S CLEVER CANDIDATES FOR HONORS ON GRIDIRON THIS SEASON.

English High is a member of the Interscholastic League and also the Boston School Association, and has already beaten Roxbury High in the first championship game. This contest was an accepted victory for English High, but harder games are coming which will test the mettle of the football warriors. Coaches Reill and Duffy are working overtime to put in the field a perfect team in all departments, and expect by the time the annual game with Boston Latin on Thanksgiving Day on the Locust street grounds that the team will be at its best. The only means for drawing a comparison between the two rivals to date was the game with Groton. Boston Latin won from the strong prep school, while English High was beaten. If arrangements can be satisfactorily arranged the English High team will go to Brookline at the close of the season here to play for the interscholastic championship.

English High expects to make a good showing on the gridiron this Fall, as the material which has turned out for the coaches to mold into an eleven has given every evidence of being up to the usual high standard. Captain Edmunds, the star colored fullback, has the support of the whole school body behind him, and, as last year, he will probably be the best line breaker in the school league. The team appears to be well balanced and is especially strong at end with Faulkner, who is a marvel in handling the pigskin on the forward pass and getting down the field when the onside kick is in use.

OVER SIX MILLION FANS SAW BIG LEAGUE GAMES

The greatest baseball year known in the history of baseball is the one which has just closed. A careful compilation of the daily attendance records, which have been kept ever since the American League expanded First, shows that 1907 has all other baseball years by more than a million.

It also proves that baseball is the national game, and not football, as many have been claiming. With the two big leagues drawing such immense crowds, the resulted. The Boston-New York

DARTMOUTH BEAT AMHERST AGGIES

Hanover Boys Only Made One Touchdown, but Their Goal Was Never in Danger.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 12.—Despite the score of 6 to 0, Dartmouth played rings around the Amherst Aggies yesterday and again the ball was worked down field, only to be lost by penalties or fumbles. The game began with a three-yard run by Saxon, who caught Cobb's kick off. Hicks made five and Ingersoll got around end for eight. Stuart tried the other end for two and Ingersoll went around for a forward pass to Roberts on the 5-yard line. Stuart tore off a gain of ninety between cheers and finger-nail biting, and Ingersoll on a delayed pass to Hicks got over the line. Ingersoll missed the goal. Score, 6 to 0.

Amherst received the ball on the kick-off and Ingersoll punted to the middle of the field, where Newhall was downed

GYMKHANA IN AUTO WORLD

The word "Gymkhana" has given rise to a great deal of inquiry as to its origin, and the exact meaning of the word is generally believed that it has its origin in the Persian word tchak-tchak, which means a ball or game. The word has gradually worked into India, where we get it, which is the name of a game played on horseback with a ball and mallets. Polo is the game in which the Englishman delights most, and it is played in all parts of the world. Polo is played on horseback, and the players are divided into two teams, each team consisting of four players. The game is played on a field of grass, and the players use mallets to hit the ball. The game is played in two halves, each half lasting for a certain number of minutes. The game is played in all parts of the world, and is a very popular game. It is played in India, where it is called polo, and in America, where it is called polo. The game is played in all parts of the world, and is a very popular game. FORTUNES MADE IN BOSTON BUSINESS SECTION LAND

CITY REAL ESTATE GROWS EVER IN VALUE

Land in Boston Proper Offers Wonderful Opportunities for Investment.

PROJECTORS BECOME RICH

The change of [illegible] in Boston real estate affords [illegible] a study. The step-[illegible]-ation of every property [illegible] to the business [illegible] the trend in many particulars [illegible].

No single [illegible] is more [illegible] Temple place. [illegible] the northeast corner of Washington street and Temple place, comprising [illegible] square feet of land, assessed in 1841 at $30,000, [illegible] was sold up to $90,000 [illegible] in 1845 to $45,000 and [illegible] the corresponding [illegible].

The property [illegible] of Winthrop, Summer and Kingston streets, [illegible] by the Old [illegible] Company, assessed at $400 feet of land, [illegible] and in 1906 was assessed at $140,000, [illegible] two years [illegible] and now it is [illegible] the highest [illegible] actual valuation.

Hub Outclasses Other Cities.

To study the increased valuation of Boston real estate and compare them with the increased valuation of other cities of the same size as Boston is to find much in favor of this city as a field for investment. No other city can tell the same story.

Real estate has always been a safe and safe investment, all things being considered. The old families of Boston have their wealth because of the steady and in not a few instances rapid increase in the value of their estates and houses. The most valuable site to-day in the center of Washington and Winter, with its 1,953 feet. In 1901 the [illegible] of this piece of property was $350,000. In 1902 it had risen to $525,000, and in 1903 it was assessed at $700,000. In 1904 and $28,000 in 1907. The estate [illegible] was increased in 1901 for $1,200,000 [illegible] and in 1907 $1,245,000 for 10,415 [illegible].

These are two typical instances of values on properties in the heart of the city, and from this locality all around streets ing to Dock square. There has been an increase of twenty per cent in valuation within the last ten years.

In the Wholesale District.

The wholesale district, including Frank lin, High, Federal and other streets, where wool, leather, dry goods and other business interests are centred, shows a decided increase in valuation, and while the wool district is going across Congress street, there is a remarkable demand for business sites all around in this locality. The old sites of fifty years ago are gone, once the homes of many Bostonians, are now given up to business. The old Cruft block on Pearl street was built. This comprised four houses numbered 1 to 7, and this whole area had been previously the residence of Gov. Cruft. Next to and with the Quincy and Brooks blocks on Pearl street are vacant lots.

These changes in farming residential districts to business centres are going on many years ago in what is now known as the wholesale district, have enriched many old families. When the [illegible] of the total valuation of property in this city from 1800 to 1865 is compared with that of the present [illegible] in 1865, $300,917,700. The greatest increase was [illegible] in the last decade, a time when important changes were taking place in the property [illegible].

High Prices for Land.

High prices have been paid for land in Boston, and at the time that Harrey D. Parker bought the estate on the corner of Tremont and School streets of T. O. H. P. Burnham, he paid $2,000 for 1,204 feet, a little over $1 a foot. This was considered at the time the highest price for land ever paid in this city.

Some old families acquired land by right of possession. Some of the land on the westerly slope of Beacon Hill was so obtained [illegible].

The [illegible] of Harrison Gray Otis as one who had squatter rights.

Tremont street, in 1835, had twenty-eight brick stores opposite the old mansion, [illegible] between street and beautiful square. [illegible] was not completed till 1841 and consisted of twenty-two [illegible] but these stores are considered [illegible] as the most valuable site of real estate From Bowdoin square to Boylston street, on Washington, in 1840 and afterwards as to-day. There was great activity, the [illegible] a going along Tremont street to an extent that real estate men are watching it with interest.

Tremont Street's Growth.

The withdrawal of the street cars and the Common have made Tremont street popular in many ways, and has increased valuation to large figures. St. Paul's Church, near Temple place, has on 5,742 feet of land a valuation of $8,000.

The retail trade is increasing here and [illegible] itself along Boylston street. [illegible] who are holding their property on south and North Hanover streets in the middle of the markets, are realizing over the prospects of D. Pierce and the Bowdoin square [illegible] are [illegible] valuable estates.

The trend of [illegible] on this street may [illegible] to Huntington avenue beyond Clarendon street, and not a few [illegible] Boylston street, as the railroad brought [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] make changes in the course of the retail [illegible] Boylston. This will not affect the property of Boylston street, many interested [illegible] actually claim and there is a [illegible] of [illegible] as to the exact [illegible] Clarendon

Along Boylston Street.

However this may be, those who rented [illegible] stores formerly on Boylston street have had generally the second story for their [illegible] on account of increased rentals, and many are locating on Newbury street, which in the near future may turn many [illegible] Ordinary stores on Boylston street to [illegible] Providence street rent to-day for $7,000 a year, and as this thoroughfare is the direct route to Cambridge and other places, it is destined to be a most popular boulevard. [illegible] of the retail streets of this city. Stores on Tremont street have gone from $7,000 to $12,000 a year within a few years, and [illegible] and will continue to advance with in the next five years.

Water front property is of steady growth. Central wharf, once [illegible] 200,324 feet, assessed in 1901 for $450,700 [illegible] land at $125,700 and building at $325,000, in 1907 the land is assessed for $701,000 and the building at the same amount, $80,000 corresponding increase is noticed all along the water front. Rowe's wharf in 1901 on 73,105 feet of land was assessed at $250,000, building $55,000 in 1907 the land in value went up to $340,200 and the building stayed at $75,000.

The property on Columbus avenue awaits a boom if the Boston & Albany railroad takes possession of the Park square station, and even there to-day land claims a valuation of $40 to $80 a foot.

Real estate in Boston affords the investor much encouragement, notwithstanding the occasional reverses.

There is no better return for the money expended and no city in the United States [illegible] such steady and certain rewards for investments in growing real estate properties.

The way of developing apartment houses on Huntington avenue, on Commonwealth avenue, St. Botolph street and other streets is a matter in itself, and illustrates how the projectors have grown wealthy by such enterprises as well as have made opportunities for increased valuation in localities which are building up around where vacant land was too costly [illegible] a few years ago.

One of the big deals of the week was [illegible] Wentworth, N. H. [illegible] the hotel where the celebrated Japanese-Russian treaty of peace was signed. It was built by the late Frank Jones of Portsmouth at an estimated cost of $700,000, and is said to be worth even more.

Big Piano Bargains Anti-Piano Trust Sale

Swell Bargains This Week. In fixing a sacrifice or selling price on a piano for our weekly disposal sale, the name of the maker has nothing whatever to do with the matter. One piano may be quoted at $450 by its maker in its own warerooms, but when, through force of circumstances, it gets to our storage sales-rooms it must bear the sacrifice tag, just the same as the piano whose maker quotes its price at $250, $300 or $400. We play no favorites—the only one who wins is the bright and early customer at our sales.

Don't think because we name the same make of Piano day after day and week after week that we have no other kinds. We have in our stock scores of Pianos the names of which are not familiar to New England people. We always name the leading Boston and New England makes, those having the high standard of workmanship with which we Bostonians are so well acquainted. Any week you are liable to get a swell bargain in any of the following makes: Wellington, Chicago—Sommer, Omaha, Neb.—Whitney, Chicago—Smith & Barnes, Chicago—Rogers, Bros., Chicago—Marshall & Wendell, New York—Kranich & Bach, New York — Kingsbury, Chicago — Woodbury, Leominster—Geo. Steck, New York—Jacob Bros., New York. People familiar with these makes will know that they are excellent pianos in every respect. They are sold at a less price than New England makes only because Boston is not acquainted with their true worth.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

THE BEST MAKES—WHY PAY MORE?

If You Don't See What You Want in Above List—We'll Get It For You

Don't get the impression that only second-hand Pianos can be had at these sales—as a matter of fact we sometimes sell the entire stock of new Pianos of some small dealer who through force of circumstances was obliged to "shut up shop," store it all away and finally let it go. We have in the course of a year hundreds of new Pianos that in the "course of events" come up in the salesrooms to be sacrificed.

THE KRAKAUER PIANO

is popular with young and old, pupil and teacher, amateur and virtuoso. The forty years of experience in piano building is possible in artistic perfection seldom equalled, and in musical and singing tone is the delight of all who hear it.

On a basis of comparative value The Krakauer is certainly entitled to first consideration, for, in intrinsic worth, it surpasses many instruments of much greater cost. A glimpse of the artistic possibilities of The Krakauer, supplied with its moderate price, will prove a pleasing revelation.

WHAT DO YOU PAY FOR MILK? TRUST IS NOW GETTING TWO PRICES.

Increased Figure Preferred by Contractors, but It Is Not Up to Consumers.

BLAME FARMERS FOR RAISE.

Enormous Burden Heaped on Buyers in Greed for Greater Profits.

FACE GRAND JURY PROBE

Monopolized Market Strikes Heavy Blow at Families of Toiling Thousands.

THE Boston American has indisputable proof that the contractors of Boston are not sticking to the nine-cent a quart rate for milk. A receipt for milk sold in Cambridge, at two prices to the same consumer, is shown on this page. Milk patrons are urged to refuse to pay more than eight cents for milk.

While the Trust is taking what it can get in the hope of getting nine cents for most of the 400,000 quarts of milk delivered daily in Boston, it is facing another peril—the Grand Jury inquisition, which District Attorney John B. Moran added by Lawyer Henry D. Yeaton, is prosecuting.

The District-Attorney is hopeful of indicting some person or persons for "a conspiracy in restraint of trade" on account of the uniform raise of milk in Boston to nine cents a quart.

Enormous Yearly Burden.

For twelve days now, the price demanded of the public has been nine cents a quart, an increase of one cent. One cent a quart extra to the public means $4,000 a day or $1,460,000 a year.

The increase in the price of milk, then, means an additional burden of $1,460,000 a year on the people of Greater Boston.

The poor man uses nearly as much milk as the rich man. He usually has more baby mouths to feed and the baby must have milk, good milk, or die. The great class of workingmen of Boston are standing the most of this additional expense of $1,460,000 a year.

Who gets the money and why is he able to arbitrarily collect this additional tribute from the people? The grand jury is trying to find the answer from its investigation.

The farmer who produces the milk admits he is getting a little more than formerly. But he declares he never got enough. He says that he can make no profit at either the prices he did get or the prices he is getting now. He asks: "Why can't I, who make the milk, have a profit on my industry and my investment?" On the other hand, the consumer asks: "If milk can be produced and delivered in Boston for 8 and 4½ cents a quart, why must I pay 9 cents?"

Market is Monopolized.

The answer to both of these questions is combination. Combinations means monopoly.

The Boston market is monopolized. The middleman gets the profit. He stands between the farmer, on the one hand, and the consumer, on the other, and fixes the price that the former shall get and the price that the latter shall pay. In Boston to-day, the former price is fixed as low as the farmer will stand for—so that he scarcely makes any profit—and the latter price is fixed as high as the public will stand for. And if the public refuses outright to pay nine cents it gets its milk at eight cents, and the middleman still makes a big profit.

The Boston Milk Trust says that the farmer is entirely to blame and that it is losing money on milk—or, at least, it isn't making a fair profit.

Nevertheless, the milk laid down to the retailer in Boston costs no more than five cents a quart, in round figures, on the other side, and the consumer pays nine cents. The cent a quart belongs to the middleman, the man who distributes and who fixes the prices. It amounts to $16,000 a day in Boston; $5,840,000 a year. Fully $6,000,000 is sunk by the people of Boston in the abyss of the combination.

"Advanced by Farmers."

Here is the advertisement that the contractors circulated when they boosted the prices:

On October 1, the price of milk will be advanced by the farmers, for the following reasons:

The high cost of hay and grain.

The scarcity of farm labor.

The cost of the sanitary improvement of the dairies.

Therefore, a corresponding advance will be made to the consumer.

The consumer will ask why, if the profits of the middleman are so big, the farmers do not deliver their milk directly into Boston and sell it themselves. There are two good reasons. The first is that the farmers are not sufficiently organized. None of them produces enough milk himself to make it worth while to sell direct to the consumer. The second reason is that, even if the farmers do organize on a small scale, or do attempt to send in their milk, they are blocked by the railroads.

Must Lease Railroad Cars.

The bulk of milk used in Boston comes in from the North, over the Boston & Maine road. The Boston & Maine will not take small consignments in its refrigerator cars. It will only lease the cars outright, $100 per car per mile per year. It insists that this be on a basis of at least forty miles. That means the cost must at least $4,000 per year.

If a farmer with fifty cars a day, say, wants to ship his milk to Boston, he must put it in a sausage car, where during almost of the year it will spoil. It is absolutely necessary to keep milk chilled, or it goes above a certain temperature it is spoiled.

The contractors of Boston hire these cars. Either the farmer must ship with them or keep out of the Boston market.

The contractor can fill his cars and get his milk into Boston with the utmost economy. He can put 1,000 cans in a car, because he can run that car through stations where there is the milk to fill it and keep it on the road until it is filled. When it is filled, he leaves the rest of the milk on the farmer's hands. It costs him only a little more than a mill and a third to import a quart of milk, a little more than a cent a can. The cost is insignificant to the contractor. To the farmer, all the circumstances of freightage make it prohibitive.

Handicap for Producers.

The Boston & Albany and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads lately offered to take anybody's milk in its refrigerator cars, but it says "you must pay us ½ a cent or 1 cent a can more for the additional trouble of handling small lots." That 400 cents a can means a whole lot to the consumer and a handicap to the farmer, when it be realized that Boston alone consumes 400,000 cans of milk a day.

When Boston was paying 8 cents a quart for its milk the farmers of New Hampshire, on an average of 75 miles from Boston, were getting 25 cents a can, a trifle less than 3 cents a quart. The farmers sent to the railroads, the middlemen (the contractors) and the retailers. The farmers say that they received 3 cents out of it.

Those farmers are now getting around 32½ cents a can for their milk, or a trifle less than four cents a quart. The contractors are allowing the farmers seven cents a can more than they did, and are trying to make the public pay 8½ cents a can more.

In other words, in addition to the extra price the farmer got, the consumers pay $270,000. The consumers stand all the additional price to the farmers, plus $270,000 a year. That $270,000 a year is an additional percentage for the middleman, which he tacks on because the farmer is getting more, too.

Sell Under Contract.

The seven cents a can average advance goes to the farmers who ship from a radius of thirty-six miles of Boston. One cent that is allowed for every twenty miles farther distant.

Unless the farmers accept the price the contractors offer, it is said they get from one to two cents less a can for their milk. And if there is an excess supply their milk is left on their hands. It is advantageous for them to sell under contract.

To the farmers, who are making more money for their milk, the claim is made that the supply of Boston is so great, that it is so particularly just now, because people are reducing their consumption on account of the advance in price. The consumer is told that he must pay the additional price because the farmer is getting more.

The milk supply of Boston is practically controlled by the following firms:

The Boston Dairy Company, H. H. Hood & Sons, the Elm Farm Milk Co., the C. Brigham Company and D. Whiting & Sons, all incorporated except the latter. The Elm Farm and C. Brigham Company are said to be, in turn, controlled by D. Whiting & Sons.

Deny Restraint of Trade.

The officers of these concerns say absolutely that there is no combination in restraint of trade. They say they are all independent of each other and are fighting each other for the market. They say that they make their contracts for milk without regard to each other.

It is known that the farmers cannot get more from one firm than from another and that the whole public has to pay the combined price. How that is all determined is the subject of the present Grand Jury investigation.

The contractors succeed in doing business with the farmers independently, because the Boston Co-Operative Milk Producers' Union was decreased in membership from 1,588 to 600. William A. Hunter is secretary of this organization. Mr. Hunter had been subpoenaed before the Grand Jury and was questioning yesterday at the District Attorney's office with Mr. Yeaton.

STATE HOLDS $3000 DEAD WOMAN LEFT

Mrs. Ann Thomas Was Killed by Illuminating Gas Last Week.

No one having appeared to claim the three bank books aggregating $3,000 and the $22 which was found in the effects of Mrs. Ann Thomas, who died at her lodgings, No. 372 Blackmut avenue on Thursday, the property has been turned over to the State by Medical Examiner Macdonald. Having left no relatives as far as the police could ascertain, the body was ordered buried yesterday.

Mrs. Thomas lived alone in the apartment and never even allowed Mrs. Lamb, the landlady, to enter her room. On Thursday Mrs. Lamb smelled the odor of gas escaping from the woman's room. Upon investigating she was found upon the floor dead, due to gas asphyxiation. The bank books will be held by the State for some time in the hope that some will be found who is a relative of the woman. She was about 70 years old and had been a widow for the past twenty-two years.

FINE MAN $20 FOR CARRYING SLINGSHOT

For carrying a slingshot, John Berrick, a Lynn shoeworker, was fined $20 by Judge Ely in the Municipal Court yesterday. The slingshot weighed one and a half, and in the opinion of the police was one of the most vicious weapons ever found on a prisoner. Berrick was arrested in the North Station by Officer Kelleher for creating a disturbance.

Solution of $100 Prize Story---A Double Conspiracy

Final Chapter of the Seventh in the Series of Startling Adventures of Zara, Woman of Mystery.

By Asa Roland.

CHAPTER VI.

Mental condition as I entered the yards, according to my promise to Mr. Ledgeworth the following afternoon, could be better imagined than described. I had been beaten on my own story, just when I was on the point, with Zara's aid, of solving the mystery. A bull pup robbed of a bone could be no worse than I.

However, I put the best face on it that was possible, and responded to Mr. Ledgeworth's effusive greeting with rather a hearty congratulation.

"That was what I call a most wonderful piece of work," he said, after he released my hand. "I am a friend of the newspapers after this for life."

"Yes, of course," I said, trying to smile. "But I wish you had had the story for me, just the same. You know I had just started work on it, and——"

"But I supposed you had fixed it in some way so it could not get out," he cried, in apparently astonished. "I couldn't do anything else but follow your directions, could I?"

I wasn't aware I had given him any directions, but thinking perhaps I had I assented.

By this time Mr. Howard had entered the office and insisted on shaking hands all around. He told Mr. Ledgeworth that it was a "great piece of work, a wonderful piece of work," he said, "and you, sir, are a genius."

"Don't suppose there's any use of my looking for the gang to-day," I ventured.

"Just as you say," said Mr. Ledgeworth. "The men send they have no connection. Still, if you think there are any more——"

Mr. Howard unbuckled his belt quickly at his desk, and now was busily engaged in drawing a check.

"No," I said, "I don't think so. I had better take a look at the men and try to cover some of the others."

I was on my way to the door when Mr. Howard called me and came hurrying with a check in his hand.

A Reward

"Here's a slight token of our appreciation," he began, waving the check at me. "Of course, we could not reward you sufficiently, so Mr. Ledgeworth and I decided to let you fill it out in front of the others for any amount you think proper. Be liberal! Be liberal! Remember, you have saved the reputation of the yard!"

I took the slip and stared first at Howard and then at the check.

I saw the check was made out to me and the amount left blank, that it was all except for my name and three ciphers in the space for the enumerated amount.

"Be generous to yourself," urged Mr. Ledgeworth, rubbing his hands briskly.

"But what have I done for this?" I ejaculated.

They looked at each other, then at me.

"Really, gentlemen," I continued, "I don't understand; I had not started to work on the case."

"You don't think it is liable to happen again?" Mr. Howard asked.

"Why, I don't know anything about it!" I protested. "This is all a mystery. I was called to the yard by the arrest of a two men last night. I wish I could say I had——"

"What!" exclaimed Ledgeworth, "you didn't send me the telegram last night?"

"No, I did not, unless I sent it in my sleep!" I replied.

"Show it to him!" interrupted Mr. Howard.

Ledgeworth thrust a telegram blank into my hands.

The mysterious message was as follows:

"Arrest men who won the pools. William J. Smith."

"I don't know who sent this," I exclaimed; then, almost as soon as the words were out of my mouth, I caught sight of Zara through the open office window, tripping across the yard, and a great light came to me. Her hands stuck jauntily in her automobile coat and her cap perched on the back of her head, she came leisurely to the office.

"My assistant sent this," I concluded. "Here she comes."

With both men staring at me, I opened the door and called her.

"Why didn't you let me know you were going to send this message? I demanded, when she reached the office.

"Thought I had better take instant action, because the acid had been found," she replied, calmly. "Everything is all right, I'll bet."

"But how did you manage to place the crime?" asked Mr. Howard.

"Why, she began, smiling slightly, "that was very simple. It is the first place who were arrested? The newspapers don't say."

"One was a boy of eighteen who worked as a common laborer here," said Mr. Ledgeworth. "The other was a Portuguese who acted as a plumber's helper."

"I imagined as much," replied Zara. "They got the acid from the plumber's shop."

Confesses

"The Portuguese admitted that last night," rejoined Mr. Ledgeworth. "Please go on."

"I was clear to me," said Zara, "that if your rivals in business had perpetrated the outrage they would have employed a man of more than the usual amount of intelligence. Such a man would have taken some other method. And because you had men of life grade of intellect working for you in watching for such men they would have been discovered. If the owners of those ships had been in the plot, they would have waited until the ships had established a reputation for escaping ability and then sunk them.

"By eliminating these I came to consider the problem as the work of a lower grade of mentality, and therefore beneath the scrutiny of men of higher intelligence, such as your Pinkerton men.

"Being convinced of that, it was only necessary to establish a correspondingly low grade motive for the acts. This I found in the auction pool in the yard on the maiden trips of the boats. By increasing the pools you increased the stream of the motives. As I understood an auction pool, bids are made for the most reasonable number of days. After the last bid in, the bids fall away until there is no bidding, for the dates remaining would give an unreasonable length of voyage, except in case of a breakdown or wreck.

"Consequently, those who had placed the acid in the ships would be sure to bid for a lengthy voyage, because it would cost little and they were reasonably sure of winning. Even if they had not put the acid in the ships for the same purpose of winning the pools, they could not refrain, knowing of its being there, from bidding for the dates most remote from all reasonable calculation.

Reasons

"Again, my estimation of the mental caliber of the men who planned the destruction of the ships was confirmed by the fact that when they won the pools no suspicion against them was roused. If they had been skilled workmen, their choice would have directed suspicion at once.

"The fact that they were not suspected showed me that they must have been of the lowest grade in the yard, and therefore least intelligence, their enjoyment in the prospect of the chance that the ship would not arrive until long after she was due roused no suspicion. For it was known in the yard, practically, that they could not afford to bid with the better paid men for a shorter trip. It was therefore logical to suppose that their bids were believed to have been made more as a matter of loyalty to the yard rather than from any expectancy of winning. When they won, they were probably considered lucky."

"Then you knew about $2,500," said Mr. Ledgeworth, his face hard as granite. "The Portuguese was packing his trunk to leave the city when we arrested him. He had heard of the discovery of the acid."

"You see," said Zara, turning to me with a reproachful look, "I couldn't wait. I knew!"

THE END.

BOSTON DELEGATES OFF FOR BIG LABOR CONVENTION IN TOLEDO

BARTENDERS FOR SEPARATE UNION

Hotel and Restaurant Employes Now in Alliance of Three Crafts.

The International convention of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders' Alliance, which opens to-morrow in Toledo, O., will probably be the most important gathering ever held by that organization. The bartenders' delegates will endeavor to have the three crafts comprising the organization—cooks, waiters and bartenders—segregated. The bartenders, it is said, are of the opinion that their interests would be best served by having a national organization of their own, independent of the waiters, it being asserted that the waiters predominated the organization to the detriment of the bartenders.

President Richard F. Garrity and James L. Hickey are delegates from Boston Bar Tenders' Union No. 77, and Joseph F. Laycock, James J. Lawson and Frank J. Donovan from the Boston Waiters' Union No. 80 have left Boston for the big Toledo convention.

The annual convention of the Textile Workers of America opens at Providence Tuesday. One of the important matters to be acted upon is the petition of the National Loom Fixers' Union that it be recognized as a national body.

Musicians' Protective Union No. 1,629, Knights of Labor, are made elaborate arrangements for entertaining the United States Marine Band this afternoon in Clyde Hall, No. 1,629 Washington street. Bandmaster Santelmann has arranged a popular concert for the occasion.

USES OIL ON FIRE; DIES OF HER BURNS

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 12.—The explosion of a can of oil which she was pouring on a fire in the kitchen range to-day caused the death of Mrs. Andrew J. Wills and the fatal injury of her husband. The latter leaped from a second story window to escape the flames and crawled to the nearest house. The boy met a broken leg and internal injuries which will probably cause his death. The woman was found burned to death in the cellar, where she had gone to extinguish her blazing clothing.
